

King Faisal Lectures Nixon

Jiddah, Saudi Arabia (UPI) — President Nixon, who came to this oil kingdom after making a controversial promise to supply Egypt with nuclear technology, was told bluntly by King Faisal Friday that there will be no lasting Middle East peace while Arab lands are occupied.

Faisal, the bearded white-robed ruler who initiated the Arab oil boycott against the United States last year, lectured Nixon during a toast at a lavish banquet in his honor. It was the toughest talk that Nixon has heard since he began his triumphal Middle East trip four days ago with an unprecedented reception by millions of cheering Egyptians.

"There will never be a real and lasting peace," Faisal said, "unless Jerusalem is liberated and returned to Arab sovereignty, unless liberation of all the occupied Arab territories is achieved, and unless Arab peoples of Palestine regain their rights to return to their homes."

Faisal's toast echoed a theme which Egyptian President Anwar Sadat has sounded several times with Nixon, but the king's language was much stronger. A with Sadat, Nixon avoided any direct response and said only that the United States wants to play a "positive" role in bringing peace to the Middle East.

Faisal had gone to the airport near this Red Sea port city earlier in the day to greet Nixon. Thousands of Saudi Arabians watched the reception, but they were far more subdued than the estimated 5.5 million to 7 million persons who followed the President in Egypt — an event which one Cairo official said "Allah alone could have planned."

Liquor Excluded

At the banquet for Nixon, which by Moslem custom excluded women and liquor, Faisal emphasized the Palestinian problem. "The injustice and aggression which were wrought upon the Arabs of Palestine are unprecedented in history, for not even in the darkest ages had a whole population of a country been driven out of their homes to be replaced by aliens," he said.

"The Arab nation," he said, "has appealed to the conscience of the world for more than a quarter of a century to regain their lost rights and to undo the injustice which was committed, but those appeals were in vain and they had no alternative but to resort to arms in the defense of their rights, their land, and their sacred shrines."

He praised the efforts of Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger to bring peace to the Middle East and added he hoped these efforts would continue. But his language seemed to be uncompromising in terms of concessions the United States will have to get from Israel. In his return toast at the banquet, Nixon told Faisal the United States wants "to play a helpful role."

"And we believe the secretary of state has played a helpful role, working with the governments in this area to settle their long-time differences," he said.

'Positive Role'

"But we are aware that what is new in this situation is that the United States is to play a positive role, working toward a positive peace. And it is for this reason that the interest in Saudi Arabia, apart from the desire to see you again, is so important."

The President said that of all five nations he was visiting on his Middle East trip, Saudi Arabia "has the longest period of unbroken friendship with the United States" and he said he was honored to be the first American president to visit that nation.

At a reception in the royal guest palace prior to the banquet, Faisal placed Saudi Arabia's highest commendation around Nixon's neck — the King Abdul Aziz al-Saud Award, a gold medal with emeralds hung on a gold chain. Nixon, in return, gave Faisal six reproductions of Winslow Homer paintings on porcelain plates trimmed in gold.

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, his spirits apparently improved since the start of Nixon's trip when he threatened to resign, chatted and joked with Saudi Arabian Foreign Minister Omar Saqqaf during the reception.

Press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said Nixon and Faisal would hold talks on the scope of relations between the two countries, including a recent agreement for economic cooperation, the status of Jerusalem and even the results of his earlier meetings with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat.

Lawman Program is hardly just frosting.

Driving Skills Test

Ronnie Moore is aiming for a career in law enforcement.

And his participation in the 1974 Junior Lawmen Program is pointing him in the right direction.

Sponsored by the American Legion with the cooperation of the Nebraska State Patrol, the week-long program which ended Friday, exposes the 45 selected young men to a taste of the training that regular officers undergo.

The son of Mrs. Olivia Moore, 1607 Knox, Ronnie remembers "wanting to be a cop since I was really small."

Summer Police Camp

Ronnie graduated from the cops and robbers capers of his childhood to week-long summer stays at the annual police camp. With the cops for counselors there was plenty of chance to develop some close one-to-one relationships, he explained.

"I started going down to the police station after that," recalls the Lincoln High School junior.

"I know the place backwards now," Ronnie confided. He says he spends a good deal of his spare time down at the station with his badge-wearing buddies. "It keeps me out of trouble," he grinned.

Fingerprinting Best

Criminal investigation holds the most interest for this young man. "After they solve the cases, they tell me all about them," he said. Fingerprinting, he added, is about his favorite part of the division.

He's listened in on the daily briefings given to officers before they go on duty and has practiced his marksmanship out at the police target range with Leighton Wessel, police community relations coordinator.

"I've even been at the station when the alarms have gone off. That's when it really gets exciting."

Even with all this background, Ronnie finds that the Junior

Testing his skills on the maximum performance driving run behind the wheel of a patrol car made Ronnie realize the amount of control required by a patrolman in his vehicle. No one in his class had a perfect score, he said, so Ronnie was pleased to have left all but one pylon standing in place.

Witnessing an actual sentencing in district court provided another angle of law enforcement for the group.

Along with the lessons and new experiences, Ronnie has enjoyed the companionship of his classmates, especially learning about "different small towns I never heard of."

Ronnie has only one complaint about the program — "I kinda wish it were longer."

Highway 77 Car Crash Injures 8

A Lincoln family was injured in a two-car crash in Cortland on U.S. 77 Thursday afternoon, according to the State Patrol.

The patrol said Derald Goetz, 39, of 5757 Stockwell, was listed in "good" condition under observation for chest injuries in the intensive care unit of Bryan Memorial Hospital and his wife Shirley, 37, was listed in "good" condition.

Two Goetz children, Douglas and Dennis, were treated and released. Two passengers in the Goetz vehicle, Brenda Welch, 16, and Barbara Jacobs, 39, were also treated and released.

The patrol said the driver of the other car Richard Taylor, 59, of Kearney, was treated and released from Lincoln General Hospital and his wife, Vesta Mae, 48, was hospitalized in "fair" condition with broken ribs and a hip laceration.

U.S. Offers Egypt N-Aid

Cairo — President Nixon and President Anwar el-Sadat announced Friday that the United States had agreed to provide Egypt with nuclear technology for peaceful purposes.

The agreement is part of a sweeping declaration of friendship and cooperation signed by the two leaders before Nixon flew from Cairo to Saudi Arabia on the second leg of his tour of the Middle East.

In the Cairo declaration Nixon also pledged the United States to "help take into due account the legitimate interest of all the peoples in the Middle East including the Palestinian people, and the right to existence of all states in the area."

The presidents signed the declaration in a solemn ceremony before television cameras and newsmen in the 18th century French-style decor of one of the ceremonial halls of the Abdin Palace, the presidential mansion in downtown Cairo.

The signing was the final event in Nixon's triumphal visit during which he was cheered by millions of Egyptians in Cairo, Alexandria and in train-side towns between the two cities.

This morning the two presidents flew in an American helicopter from Alexandria to the pyramids of Giza, outside Cairo, where Nixon and his party, including Mrs. Nixon, did a quick sight-seeing tour and watched Bedouin Arab horses perform an intricate dance — a spectacle that is traditional at gatherings of potentates in this part of the world.

This was what Sadat had in mind when he told Kissinger, as quoted by the latter, "let's do the big things, not the small things."

"The big things are beginning to happen" one of Sadat's admirers in the official party said.

Egypt wants most of all access to American and generally Western technology which it hopes to use together with foreign capital coming from the oil rich Arab states as well as the U.S., Japan and Western Europe. This has been one of Sadat's basic long-range objectives ever since Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger first came here in November.

Psychologically, for the Egyptians, the most striking aspect of the declaration was the announcement that Egypt will get access to American nuclear technology. To Egyptians this opens the prospect that Egypt will at last become a major power commensurate with her size and her population of 37 million, instead of remaining a country that is mired in poverty, and unable to give essential services to its citizens, because it has to bear a nearly unbearable burden of military expenses.

because it failed to meet the issues and to carry the burden of proof.

"NPPD's only excuse now appears to be to blame the hearing officer rather than its own failing," he said. "It would also appear that NPPD counsel is resorting to the media in an effort to influence the acting DEC director in his ultimate decision on a basis that is entirely outside the record."

Lane said Nelson is a "highly competent trial attorney" and has a "distinguished record" as an assistant U.S. attorney. Nelson's efforts to get all of the evidence out in the open, he said, reflect "a scrupulous regard for fairness" and refute Crosby's "grossly improper" accusations.

Fossil City Visits Mineral Show

FOSSIL CITY . . . is a 300 million-year-old community in Lincoln.

A 300-million-year-old village right here in Lincoln? If it sounds fishy, that's because it is.

Fossilized marine invertebrates are the makings of a miniature city now on display at the National Gem and Mineral Show at the State Fairgrounds.

For rockhound-creator Vone Luthi of Topeka, Kan. finding the fossils is only half the fun; fitting them together to form people and places is her real forte.

"I take them just as I find them," she said, "and make whatever the piece says to me."

She says she neither cuts nor trims any of the pieces to fit her needs, but rather sifts through buckets of bits for just the right shape.

"When I get an idea there's no way to sketch or write it down. I see two pieces and I have to get them together right away. And then the idea just grows."

Mrs. Luthi began her fossil sculpture about four years ago when a bout of arthritis and diabetes kept her prone most of the time.

Flat on her stomach with a cookie sheet or a window sill for a working table, and a tweezer as her only tool, Mrs. Luthi worked to make her fossils live again in human forms.

Although she's up and about now, Mrs. Luthi says she still lies down to put the heads and bodies of her figures together. "When you sit above the pieces, the heads are liable to be too big for the bodies," she explained.

Using fossils that she's found in rock quarries and rocky lake shores in Shawnee County, Kan.,

Mrs. Luthi noted that the ancient bits that are broken and distorted are of little value as specimens, but excellent as a creative medium.

"I use the imperfections — and people are generally imperfect," she philosophized.

Striving for authenticity in every detail, the creative rockhound makes no two individuals alike — even in her 100-strong crowd of bleacher-bound spectators at "The Fossil Circus."

She's even done a likeness of Lt. Gov. Frank Marsh, an avid rockhound himself, who will serve as emcee of the show's awards banquet Saturday night. She pictures him winning the "Noble Stone Dog" prize of the year.

The gem show continues through Sunday and those with full purses can purchase anything from jewelry makings to polished stone toilet seats.

Insurance Sales Rise In Beatrice

Flood insurance in Beatrice has found widespread acceptance among property owners along the Blue River who suffered water damages during last October's flood.

A total of 100 policies have

The lower rates went into effect after the Beatrice City Council endorsed the flood plain map and land use regulations outlined by the state Natural Resources Commission.

The number of policies purchased contrasts sharply with the 20 other Nebraska communities that have started flood zone land use regulations, according to the State Department of Insurance.

Club's Attorney Calls NPPD Bias Accusation 'Slur'

By BOB GUENTHER

James A. Lane, an Ogallala attorney for the Platte Valley Sierra Club, Friday accused Nebraska Public Power District attorney Robert Crosby of trying to unjustly discredit a hearing officer in hopes of pressuring the state into licensing the Gerald Gentleman Power Station.

Lane, a former president of the State Bar Association, called Crosby's charge that hearing officer Duane Nelson was biased against NPPD "a wholly unjustified slur."

Nelson, following nine days of testimony on the 650-megawatt power plant near Sutherland, recommended NPPD be denied permission to construct the plant until either a scrubber is installed to remove air pollutants from stack gases or NPPD provides more data on coal quality.

NPPD rejected both of Nelson's suggestions to bring the plant into compliance.

After learning of Nelson's recommendation, Crosby said the decision was not unexpected in light of Nelson's "apparent bias."

The acting director of the State Department of Environmental Control (DEC) must now decide whether he should follow Nelson's findings or overrule him and grant the application. Crosby said he was hopeful the DEC would grant the permit.

Lane commented, "It is highly improper for an attorney as an officer of the court to accuse a court of bias after the trial and after the record is closed."

He said it is a standard procedure for a party which feels a judge is biased to make objections before and during the trial for the record.

"At no time prior to this hearing did Mr. Crosby make any motion to remove the hearing officer nor at any time during the nine days of trial did Mr. Crosby preserve in the record any instances of bias for future appeal," he said. "The charge of apparent bias is obviously not true . . ."

The reason NPPD lost, Lane said, is Interest Expressed In September State Primary

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

A legislative subcommittee Friday veered from its study of annual sessions of the Unicameral to express interest in moving Nebraska's primary election date from May to September.

"We're ready for a September primary," Sen. Eugene Mahoney of Omaha, chairman of the Legislative Council executive board, said. "It's long overdue."

Sens. Glenn Goodrich and John Savage, both of Omaha, also supported the idea. Savage, in fact, suggested that the primary be moved even closer toward the November general election, perhaps within 30 days.

Both Sides Seen

Summoned to discuss the matter, Secretary of State Allen Beermann said he can "see arguments both ways" in choosing between May and September.

Senators said the issue relates to their study of annual sessions since the May primary date now tends to interfere with the legislative process during election years.

There is little opportunity for full-time campaigning by senators who are in session until April in election years, they noted.

And, Savage said, many senators are "wasting time campaigning in the Legislature instead of doing their work."

Senators Also Object

Senators also generally objected to the long general election campaign, which theoretically runs from the May primary election until November.

Unless some special provision were made for the presidential primary election, Beermann noted, it would be "thrown out" by moving the primaries to September since presidential nominees already would have been chosen by then.

Nebraska's presidential primary is a $4 million business for the state every four years, Beermann estimated.

And it "forces presidential candidates to come to the state," he said. "Otherwise, a state like Nebraska may never see them."

Moving to a September date would probably benefit incumbents by shortening the time period in which challengers could make their names and views known, he pointed out.

Nebraska held an August primary in 1950. Beermann said, but the date was promptly moved back to May because of citizen complaints.

A later election could interfere with county fairs, the State Fair, vacation plans, harvest chores and school opening, he noted.

But if the Legislature decides it wants the date moved, he said, his office will help prepare such legislation. About 400 sections of the statutes would need to be amended, he said.

Study Recess Suggested

In other action, Mahoney suggested that legislative session time could be better utilized if lawmakers recessed for a week or two after their first day in session.

During that time, he said, pre-filed bills could be subjected to study, or hearing, giving the Legislature a full docket to confront when it returned for its second day in session.

The Legislature is in session for only short periods of time during its first week, awaiting committee action on bills before it can launch full-scale floor debate on legislation.

Proposed By Johnson

The study of annual sessions was proposed by Sen. E. Thome Johnson of Fremont, who chaired the subcommittee meeting.

"There should be a better way to conduct legislative sessions," he said.

In 1974, he noted, bills became trapped in "a logjam" and "everybody got uptight."

Goodrich and Mahoney suggested that the speaker could better exercise his authority to establish a daily agenda for the Legislature.

U.S. Will Rely On Controls In Giving Nuclear Aid

The New York Times

Washington — In extending nuclear assistance to Egypt, the United States will rely on international controls as well as special American safeguards to assure that none of the nuclear materials is diverted to the production of atomic bombs.

Despite the immediate anxiety expressed in some congressional quarters, officials of the State Department and Atomic Energy Commission expressed confidence that cooperation with Egypt in the peaceful development of atomic power would not lead to Egyptian possession of nuclear weapons.

In large measure, their confidence rested on the effectiveness of an elaborate system of safeguards and inspections, developed first by the United States and more recently by the International Atomic Energy Agency, to prevent the diversion of fissionable materials into the manufacture of weapons.

The Nixon-Sadat communique issued in Cairo Friday made clear that the provision by the United States of nuclear reactors and the uranium to fuel them was contingent upon the working out of a safeguards agreement between the two nations.

The expectation was that the main burden of carrying out the safeguards would fall on the International Atomic Energy Agency, the semi-autonomous United Nations agency that has assumed in recent years the primary responsibility of monitoring the peaceful development of atomic energy. But in addition, State Department officials said the United States would insist on special bilateral controls designed to give added assurance against diversion of any fissionable materials into military use.

The United States now has cooperative atomic agreements with some 35 countries, including Israel. In some cases, the assistance is limited to research, but with 25 countries the United States has cooperative agreements on the development of atomic power, such as it is now proposing to extend to Egypt and Israel.

Under an Atoms-for-Peace agreement dating back to 1955, the United States in 1961 provided Israel with a small, five-megawatt research reactor, which is located at Nathalsore, the Israeli nuclear research center. Controls over the use of the reactor were exercised first by the United States and then the responsibility was transferred to the International Atomic Energy Agency.

Less Extensive Program

Similarly, the Soviet Union, which has had a far less extensive program of international cooperation than the United States, provided Egypt with a small, two-megawatt research reactor in 1960. So far as is known, neither Soviet nor international controls were exercised over the reactor, but U.S. officials said the reactor has operated so infrequently that it could not have produced significant amounts of plutonium for possible use in a bomb.

The general appraisal of American officials is that Israel is far ahead of Egypt both in nuclear technology as well as in supply of fissionable materials that could be used to fabricate weapons. Under conditions of strict secrecy, Israel in the late 1950's obtained from France a reactor of a type particularly suited for producing plutonium. The reactor situated at Dimona is not subject to any known international safeguards and is believed capable of producing enough plutonium for a few atomic weapons a year.

Now, almost in parallel, Israel and Egypt want to take the relatively big technological step of building large reactors capable of producing substantial amounts of electricity. In taking that step, they are turning to the United States for the reactor plants and the enriched uranium to fuel them.

State Department officials said the plan was to provide Egypt with a moderate-sized, two-reactor power plant capable of generating 600 megawatts of electricity. A similar offer is expected to be extended to Israel when President Nixon visits that country later this month.

'Double-Edged Sword'

As the Nixon-Sadat communique pointed out, nuclear energy is "a double-edged sword, offering opportunities for peaceful applications, but raising the risk of nuclear destruction."

The basic technology involved in designing and operating an atomic power plant is much the same as that required for fabricating an atomic bomb. The once secret technology of atomic bombs, however, is now widely known, with the result that any nation with trained scientists and engineers should be capable of fabricating at least a rudimentary weapon.

Brezhnev: I'm Ready To Ink Partial N-Ban

Moscow (UPI) — Communist Party General Secretary Leonid I. Brezhnev Friday declared himself ready to sign a partial underground nuclear test ban treaty with President Nixon during his forthcoming Moscow visit and eventually end all such tests.

Brezhnev told a Kremlin rally for Sunday's elections to the Supreme Soviet (parliament) the agreement could set out a timetable for the eventual end of underground tests.

"We are ready now to agree with the United States to restrict the number of underground nuclear tests and to end them completely in an appropriate and agreed time," he said.

Brezhnev's statement on a partial underground nuclear test ban treaty was his first to the Soviet people on the subject and the first public expression of Soviet readiness to reach such an agreement.

Brezhnev also called for "maximum restraint" by Moscow and Washington in developing new strategic weapons. At the same time, he said in view of continuation of the arms race, Soviet leaders devote "unremitting attention to consolidation of the country's defenses."

He got a thunderous nine-minute ovation from 6,000 persons in the Kremlin Palace of Congresses at the end of the one-hour and 47-minute speech, with shouts of "Glory!" and "Hurrah!"

Brezhnev said he was confident his meeting with Nixon would be a success.

Improvement Must Go On

"One can read in the foreign press pessimistic appraisals of the possible outcome of the meeting in Moscow," he said. "We are of a different opinion. The improvement of Soviet-American relations can and must continue."

"Nobody, of course, is going to decide hastily questions that are not yet ripe. But time must not be marked either."

Brezhnev praised the Soviet-American strategic arms limitation agreements of 1972 and said, "It is necessary to follow that road and go further."

American officials have said there is no hope of reaching a new SALT agreement during the Nixon visit because the differences with the Soviet Union at this point are too great.

Working Several Weeks

Soviet and American negotiators have been working for several weeks on an agreement on the issue by the time of Nixon's visit beginning June 27, Western diplomats said.

A Soviet-American agreement signed in 1963 banned nuclear testing in the atmosphere, in space and underwater.

The last known U.S. nuclear underground test was on Feb. 27 and the last suspected in the Soviet Union on May 31.

Concorde Presents An Awesome Sight As It Lands

The Concorde supersonic jetliner touches ground at Miami's International Airport Friday after leaving Boston's Logan Airport. The flight took 80 minutes for its brief visit to Miami. It came to Boston at the invitation of John Volpe, ambassador to Italy and ex-secretary of transportation. The Concorde was built through British and French cooperation.

Sheriff Seeking 'Producer'

Lexington, Va. (UPI) — The county sheriff is looking for a man who hurriedly left town this week after posing as a Hollywood movie producer, claiming he was going to film a musical comedy about the Civil War and persuading a number of local women to pose in the nude.

The man, who used the name Mel Greenberg, appeared in this western Virginia college town of 7,600 recently and took out an ad in the local paper asking for horseback riders, dancers, singers and actors for a film he was planning.

Local authorities now believe his primary interest was to look at naked women.

He offered $12,000 for a part in the movie in which a woman would have to appear nude. The only requirement seemed to be a 36-inch bust.

A number of women were interviewed, some twice, and it was during those second interviews when they posed nude.

But when a recent graduate of the Washington & Lee University Law School got suspicious, the man suddenly left town, giving the motel a $180 check on a California bank that soon bounced.

Earth is your home and this is the view of it as seen from the National Aeronautical and Space Administration's newest weather satellite, SMS-1. The satellite made the shot as it was moving toward its on-station synchronous orbit over Brazil. The picture shows the Western Hemisphere with the west coast of Africa at the far right. Five storms are clearly seen in this May 28 photo across the top of the picture from western Canada to the Atlantic Ocean. Cumulus clouds over Florida and the Caribbean Sea allow meteorologists to infer wind directions. Cloud motions are also used.

Nuclear Arms Negotiator Resigns

Washington (AP) — Paul H. Nitze quit Friday as a senior negotiator in the nuclear arms limitation talks, saying there was little prospect of a strong new pact with the Russians amid the "depressing . . . traumatic events" at home.

Nitze, who has been the senior Pentagon negotiator for five years, never mentioned Watergate or President Nixon by name. But his words suggested disenchantment with the chief executive.

"Until the office of the presidency has been restored to its principal function of upholding the Constitution and taking care of the fair execution of the laws, and thus be able to function effectively at home and abroad," Nitze said, "I see no real prospect for reversing certain unfortunate trends in the evolving situation."

In a terse letter to Nixon, Nitze said that, since his resignation request May 28 had not been accepted, "I now feel compelled unilaterally to terminate my appointment effective today."

Nitze's action came as Nixon was making a tour of the Middle East. White House spokesmen in Jidda, Saudi Arabia, had no immediate comment.

Nitze was not available to elaborate on his action. But it obviously was a blow to the administration, coming less than two weeks before Nixon was to go to Moscow on June 27.

Some sources interpreted Nitze's resignation at this time as an expression to show disapproval in advance, should Nixon sign a new Strategic Arms Limitations Talks (SALT) agreement with fewer safeguards for American security than Nitze favors.

Key members of Congress expressed similar concern Friday about Nixon's agreement to provide materials and know-how for development of an Egyptian nuclear power generator. These critics said they feared this could open the way toward Egyptian development of nuclear weapons.

Shortly before, in Moscow, Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev declared that Russia was ready "right now" to reach an agreement with the United States,

Gulf: Withdrawal Won't Help

Pittsburgh (AP) — Gulf Oil Corp. said Friday that withdrawing from African Angola would have the opposite effect from that desired by the radical group which claims responsibility for an explosion at Gulf's headquarters here.

Paul Sheldon, Gulf's vice president for public relations, said the company has no intention of leaving Angola. He said withdrawal would provide more taxes and royalties for the Portuguese government to continue its colonial policies.

The Weather Underground, protesting Gulf's interests in the African nation, claimed responsibility for a bomb that rocked the 29th floor of Gulf's skyscraper Thursday night.

"The oil reserves are there,"

Sheldon said in defense of the company's presence in that nation. "Portugal could farm out the proven oil fields to another international oil company or to the Portuguese oil company at more favorable royalties and tax rates."

The explosion, believed by authorities to have been caused by dynamite, followed telephone warnings and letters addressed to The Associated Press and two daily newspapers. It tore a hole two feet in diameter in the floor, shattered windows and left a jumble of furniture and lamps in the offices.

Legal Requirement 'Satisfied' — Gesell

The New York Times

Washington — Federal District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell formally ruled Friday that the White House had fully "satisfied" its legal requirement to provide documents in the "Plumbers" case and set June 26 as the start for the trial of John D. Ehrlichman and three other defendants.

The judge rejected a last-minute effort by Ehrlichman and his attorneys to gain full access to his personal White

Meat Middlemen To Be Squeezed

Washington (WSN) — The Nixon administration will press middlemen to lower retail meat prices by reducing their profit margins, Kenneth Rush, President Nixon's chief economic adviser, said Friday. This is the best way to overcome the glut of meat that has depressed cattle and hog prices, Rush said. He indicated strongly to reporters that the administration will reject demands by cattlemen for meat import quotas.

U.S., NATO Declaration Planned

Washington — The United States and the North Atlantic Treaty Alliance have virtually agreed on a formal "declaration of principles" that will be issued next week at the NATO foreign ministers' meeting in Ottawa on the alliance's 25th anniversary. President Nixon and other NATO leaders may ratify the declaration when Nixon makes an anticipated stop in Brussels on his way to Moscow later this month.

New York — The possibility that the financially troubled Franklin National Bank in New York has been a conduit, perhaps unknowingly, for stolen government securities is being investigated by the Senate, well-informed sources said.

U.S. Economy Not Sinking

Washington — The United States economy may be lacking in vigor, but it is not sinking. This was indicated by the Federal Reserve Board, which reported industrial production rose in May for the second consecutive month after four months of decline. The board's index of industrial production was 0.4%.

Washington — Federal District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell formally ruled Friday that the White House had fully "satisfied" its legal requirement to provide documents in the "Plumbers" case and set June 26 as the start for the trial of John D. Ehrlichman and three other defendants.

The judge rejected a last-minute effort by Ehrlichman and his attorneys to gain full access to his personal White House files. Gesell ruled that the additional notes being sought were not relevant to the defense of Ehrlichman, the former chief domestic adviser to President Nixon.

Ehrlichman, occasionally smiling and seemingly at ease, later told newsmen he was disappointed but added: "We're going to have a trial on this issue, as I think we've always expected we would and we're confident of the outcome."

In essence, the ruling ended a three-week debate between the President and the court over executive privilege and Ehrlichman's rights that culminated in a significant retreat by the judge.

Watergate Maneuvering Seems Scattershot

By LESLEY OELSNER

Washington — The President's lawyers laid down a barrage of motions, affidavits, letters and memorandums this week in four forums — the Supreme Court, the House Judiciary Committee and two courtrooms of United States District Court. Some of the moves seemed contradictory; the total effect seemed scattershot and tangled.

But appearances were misleading, because all of the moves had a common thread: by design or not, each fitted into Nixon's basic goal, avoiding conviction in the Senate on articles of impeachment.

There was another common thread for many of the moves: the President's lawyers said, in a number of cases, that they were acting to uphold the Constitution's design of a separation of powers between the three branches of government.

The White House legal moves this week included the following:

The Supreme Court
On Monday, the President joined with the special Watergate prosecutor, Leon Jaworski, in asking the court to make public the papers in which Jaworski disclosed to District Judge John J. Sirica and to James D. St. Clair, the President's special defense lawyer, that a Watergate grand jury had named Nixon an unindicted co-conspirator in the Watergate cover-up.

James D. St. Clair

On Tuesday, the White House disclosed that it had asked the court to consider, as part of the latest Jaworski-Nixon subpoena battle, whether a grand jury has the authority to "charge an incumbent President as an unindicted co-conspirator in a criminal proceeding."

House Judiciary Committee
On Monday, the President refused to comply with the latest committee subpoena for tapes that the committee had said related largely to Watergate. The President said that to honor the committee request would erode the separation of powers by weakening the presidency.

The next day, St. Clair sought

to give the committee a 10,000-word brief presenting a rationale for the President's conduct in regard to the Watergate cover-up. The brief, which was presumed to contend that the evidence against the President was insufficient to prove criminal culpability, was rejected by the committee as out of order.

Federal District Court
In a letter addressed to "my dear Judge Sirica," St. Clair notified the court on Monday that the President would appeal Sirica's decision to give a grand jury a portion of a tape recording that allegedly related to White House, use of the Internal Revenue Service.

St. Clair filed a motion and a letter the next day asking Sirica to disclose to the President and the Supreme Court — but not, apparently, the public — all grand jury minutes and evidence concerning the jury's action in naming Nixon an unindicted co-conspirator.

He told Sirica he believed that the evidence he had heard in the closed Judiciary Committee hearings was the same evidence on which the grand jury had based its action against the President. He asserted to the judge that the evidence was insufficient.

On Wednesday, J. Fred Buzhardt Jr., the President's counsel, said in an affidavit to Judge Gerhard A. Gesell that he had "personally examined" the White House files subpoenaed by John D. Ehrlichman, one of the defendants in the "Plumbers" case, and found nothing that pertained to Ehrlichman's innocence or guilt.

Seven Legal Moves
The seven separate legal moves, technically different, had some significance because of the impeachment inquiry, and each is related to it.

First, one focus of the impeachment inquiry is the Watergate cover-up. A grand jury has named Nixon co-conspirator; if Congress agrees it will likely impeach him.

The President's lawyers must thus show that Nixon was not a conspirator, and three of those seven moves were aimed at doing that. One was the offer of the 10,000-word brief; the other two were the request to Sirica for grand jury material and the petition to the Supreme Court on the grand jury's authority.

St. Clair wants the grand jury material to use in the Supreme Court hearing. At that hearing, he plans to argue that the grand jury has no authority to charge a President, and that even if it does, its evidence was an insuff-ficient basis for naming Nixon. He wants the Supreme Court to say that Nixon should not have been named a co-conspirator. A ruling to that effect, would not be binding on Congress, but it would presumably have a psychological influence on both Congress and the public.

The objective is less clear in

St. Clair's request that the court make public the papers in which the grand jury names Nixon a co-conspirator.

However, the papers also include a brief by St. Clair that presumably makes some good arguments in Nixon's behalf, and St. Clair would want the public to know all the pro-Nixon arguments that can be mustered.

Watergate Maneuvering Seems Scattershot

©The New York Times

By LESLEY OELSNER

Washington — The President's lawyers laid down a barrage of motions, affidavits, letters and memorandums this week in four forums — the Supreme Court, the House Judiciary Committee and two courtrooms of United States District Court. Some of the moves seemed contradictory; the total effect seemed scattershot and tangled.

But appearances were misleading, because all of the moves had a common thread: by design or not, each fitted into Nixon's basic goal, avoiding conviction in the Senate on articles of impeachment.

There was another common thread for many of the moves: the President's lawyers said, in a number of cases, that they were acting to uphold the Constitution's design of a separation of powers between the three branches of government.

The White House legal moves this week included the following:

The Supreme Court
On Monday, the President joined with the special Watergate prosecutor, Leon Jaworski, in asking the court to make public the papers in which Jaworski disclosed to District Judge John J. Sirica and to James D. St. Clair, the President's special defense lawyer, that a Watergate grand jury had named Nixon an indicted co-conspirator in the Watergate cover-up.

James D. St. Clair

On Tuesday, the White House disclosed that it had asked the court to consider, as part of the latest Jaworski-Nixon subpoena battle, whether a grand jury has the authority to "charge an incumbent President as an indicted co-conspirator in a criminal proceeding."

House Judiciary Committee
On Monday, the President refused to comply with the latest committee subpoena for tapes that the committee had said related largely to Watergate. The President said that to honor the committee request would erode the separation of powers by weakening the presidency.

The next day, St. Clair sought

to give the committee a 10,000-word brief presenting a rationale for the President's conduct in regard to the Watergate cover-up. The brief, which was presumed to contend that the evidence against the President was insufficient to prove criminal culpability, was rejected by the committee as out of order.

Federal District Court
In a letter addressed to "my dear Judge Sirica," St. Clair notified the court on Monday that the President would appeal Sirica's decision to give a grand jury a portion of a tape recording that allegedly related to White House, use of the Internal Revenue Service.

St. Clair filed a motion and a letter the next day asking Sirica to disclose to the President and the Supreme Court — but not, apparently, the public — all grand jury minutes and evidence concerning the jury's action in naming Nixon an indicted co-conspirator.

He told Sirica he believed that the evidence he had heard in the closed Judiciary Committee hearings was the same evidence on which the grand jury had based its action against the President. He asserted to the judge that the evidence was insufficient.

On Wednesday, J. Fred Buzhardt Jr., the President's counsel, said in an affidavit to Judge Gerhard A. Gesell that he had "personally examined" the White House files subpoenaed by John D. Ehrlichman, one of the defendants in the "Plumbers" case, and found nothing that pertained to Ehrlichman's innocence or guilt.

Seven Legal Moves
The seven separate legal moves, technically different, had some significance because of the impeachment inquiry, and each is related to it.

First, one focus of the impeachment inquiry is the Watergate cover-up. A grand jury has named Nixon co-conspirator; if Congress agrees it will likely impeach him.

The President's lawyers must thus show that Nixon was not a conspirator, and three of those seven moves were aimed at doing that. One was the offer of the 10,000-word brief; the other two were the request to Sirica for grand jury material and the petition to the Supreme Court on the grand jury's authority.

St. Clair wants the grand jury material to use in the Supreme Court hearing. At that hearing, he plans to argue that the grand jury has no authority to charge a President, and that even if it does, its evidence was an insufficient basis for naming Nixon.

He wants the Supreme Court to say that Nixon should not have been named a co-conspirator. A ruling to that effect, would not be binding on Congress, but it would presumably have a psychological influence on both Congress and the public.

The objective is less clear in

St. Clair's request that the court make public the papers in which the grand jury names Nixon a co-conspirator.

However, the papers also include a brief by St. Clair that presumably makes some good arguments in Nixon's behalf, and St. Clair would want the public to know all the pro-Nixon arguments that can be mustered.

Yech, Another License!

If somebody could figure out a way to enforce it, he would probably come up with a license for dying. In view of the enforcement problem, however, licenses are for the living. How lucky can we get?

Latest thing in this category is a city government license for bicycle riders, any who want to take their two-wheelers on an arterial, that is. The idea of the thing is that the licensing would provide a means of education.

To get the license, the cyclist would have to pass an examination, both physical and of his or her knowledge of proper riding practices. The minimum age at which such a license would be available, incidentally, is proposed to be age 14.

Presumably, if a 13-year-old wanted to drive on an arterial, he simply could not do so. If nothing else, that provision in the thing ought to be changed.

But why any license, at all? The education theory is a great one but, in the end, would we have anything more from a practical point of view than another nuisance in our lives?

The license process would require the applicant to memorize a lot of facts that he or she would then promptly forget and/or ignore, just as is the case now with drivers' licenses. How many automobile drivers could pass the driving test six months after they took it without boning up again on the details of the rules of the road?

Not very many of them, judging from the way people drive. Rights-of-way at intersections, for instance, don't mean a thing except as a question on the driving test you have to take. In reality, the right-of-way goes to whoever gets there first, not who has things his way legally.

The streets are loaded with discourteous and bad drivers and the licensing process seems to have no effect upon them, at all.

In the area of bicycling, the idea is even more of an absurdity. The dangers of mixed cars and bicycles are inherent and no licensing program is going to eliminate them.

It's the individual's attitude that really counts and the government can't change that. Bicycle riding licenses are an idea whose time, in our opinion, has not yet come.

Peace Makes Man Fickle

A point all should appreciate is made by the large crowds turning out in Egypt to greet a newfound friend, President Richard M. Nixon of the United States. It was only months ago that Nixon was the epitome of evil in the eyes of the Arabs, a man who represented the war-making machine of the U.S.

That machine helped the enemy, Israel, in its battle for survival in the Middle East. How could a people turn so quickly from dislike and hatred to admiration?

The answer is peace. Because U.S. efforts have contributed to an end to hostilities in the Middle East, the people of Egypt are jubilant and old animosities are forgotten. It is Nixon, the peace-maker, who is being welcomed, not Nixon, the director of a powerful military force.

Perhaps there is yet hope for the world. When people respond to peace rather than war, when they look for local stability rather than military maneuvers, the situation can't be all bad.

In the past, it has been a temptation to wonder if the people of the Middle East really wanted to find the grounds for common existence and universal sovereignty.

JAMES RESTON

Resigning, An Art

NEW YORK — The art of resigning from political office — whether to slip or sneak away or go out with a bang — has declined rather seriously in this country in recent years. The people who should resign won't, and the people who shouldn't, threaten to do so.

When the old American politicians of another age differed on principle and policy or felt their "personal honor" required them to resign, they usually went out and slammed the door. But the last really dramatic political exit was Richard Nixon's own Grand Farewell after losing the California governor's race in 1962, and even then, alas, he didn't keep his word.

Henry Kissinger's recent resignation threat has done nothing to restore the art, and was not up to his usual style and wit. He was understandably irritated by charges that he had not been candid and may even have lied about his part in bugging his associates in the White House, but his threat was out of all proportion to the offense.

There are only three effective ways to deal with useful but aggressive reporters like Clark Mollenhof of the Des Moines Register Tribune, who asked Kissinger, with his customary gentility, whether the secretary had in fact initiated the wiretaps. The first way, which Mollenhof prefers, is to give him the keys to the files. The second is to repeal the First Amendment, and the third is to revive and legalize dueling for cases of "personal honor." But all three are a little awkward.

In this particular case, Kissinger somehow misplaced two of his most celebrated qualities — his sense of humor and his gift of logic. He performed like a great actor who threatens to quit the theater because he got a couple of bum reviews or was insulted going out the stage door.

"I do not believe it is possible," he said, "to conduct the foreign policy of the United States . . . when the character and credibility of the secretary of state are at issue. And if it is not cleared up, I will resign."

A QUESTION OF HONOR

This does restore an element of spunk and plain-speaking into our public affairs, but it is not very logical. For these charges against Kissinger have been rumbling in the committees of Congress and the back pages of the papers for years, and somehow, despite them, Kissinger has not only managed "to conduct the foreign policy of the United States," but has presided over one of the most brilliant chapters in the long history of American diplomacy, and has improved almost everything except the Irish question.

Also, if Kissinger thinks he should resign unless his "credibility and character" are restored at once by the Congress, what does he think President Nixon should do facing much more serious and prolonged charges of HIS credibility, character, and violation of the spirit and letter of the Constitution?

Fortunately, the nations of the world, in their dealings with the United States, are not so personal. President Sadat of Egypt, squiring Nixon and Kissinger on a whistle-stop tour from Cairo to Alexandria, was probably not devoting much thought to Chairman Rodino of the judiciary committee or Clark Mollenhof of Iowa, or even to the domestic troubles of Nixon and Kissinger.

Presumably he is dealing with the power and influence and ideals of America, which Kissinger, with his remarkable gifts, has been able to make him see. This is the paradox of the present controversy.

For while America's power and influence have always been there, somehow Kissinger has changed Washington's relations with the Middle East, China and the Soviet Union by the force of his intelligence, personality and character — particularly in his personal relations with Chou En-Lai, Sadat, Faisal, and the leaders of Israel.

He did not do this by himself. Time, geography, and power were the essential ingredients, but Kissinger seized the moment, and it is ridiculous in his own terms and on his own record and objectives, to talk of resignation.

"I have believed," he said, "that I should do what I could to heal the divisions in this country," but he is not likely to do this by resigning at the wrong time and on the wrong issue. So maybe he'd better stick around.

We Are A Mess

A physician and public health official described America as "the most over-medicated, most over-operated, most over-innoculated country in the entire world."

Dr. Ratner, professor of preventive medicine and public health at Loyola University Medical School of Chicago, and commissioner of Health at Oak Park, Illinois, added that it is also the most anxiety-ridden.

We are flabby, overweight and have lots of dental cavities. Our gastro-intestinal systems operate like a sputtering gas engine. We can't sleep and we can't get along when we are awake. We have neuroses and high blood pressure. Neither our hearts nor our heads last as long as they should. Coronary diseases at the peak of life have hit epidemic proportions. Suicide is one of the leading causes of death.

People in the United States do a tremendous amount of self-drugging with aspirin and other over-the-counter drugs which disorganize the natural chemistry of the body.

That is the whole picture of the average American from a great doctor. Will it take a food shortage to bring us back to health? A shortage of gas will help also. Walking seems to be out of style.

Miracle And New Senators

Our nation and the world we are a part of have been going through some tortuous changes, but it hasn't touched our two Nebraska senators, Hruska and Curtis. They still delay their reading of the "Nixon Transcripts," still vote right down the line with monopoly interests and the Nixon economic disasters. No two U.S. senators in the nation have so consistently failed to represent their home interests so long and so successfully.

Our state's cattle and hog-producers are facing financial ruin. Our popular governor — NOT our congressional representatives — is leading the fight to petition Washington, D.C., to reduce foreign imports of meat. Now comes Mr. Curtis to tell us that he has personal assurances from Mr. Nixon that he will make a study of the meat import problems — maybe to do some "jawboning" on the matter! Wow! What else is new!

At the same minute, Mr. Nixon takes a run-out powder for Europe and the Mideast on a somewhat pointless follow-up to Kissinger's diplomatic triumphs, leaving countless matters of U.S.A. interest unresolved, including those of the farmer and feeder.

With a congressional delegation as impotent as Nebraska's all we need now is a miracle from on high — and two new senators.

Urban Sprawl Desirable

In Mr. Brogden's proposed plan to limit development and home construction in agricultural Lancaster County, he says that the lot size in the county should be increased to five acres. It is difficult to understand why a person wishing to have a home in a rural area should be required to purchase 217,800 square feet of land for one resident, when his city cousin is required to purchase only 6,000 square feet in an A-2 residential area.

The apparent purpose in requiring five acres is to prevent anyone from building on one acre a home with a private sanitary sewer, even though the law now permits a builder to have a private sewer system for one residence on one acre.

For the planning staff to recommend approval, and then ask for denial, based upon the suggested Goals and Policies Plan (which is not an adopted ordinance) certainly appears to be a desire by the city to take over complete control of the county and restrict county growth. Lancaster County has good commissioners and good staffs. They are capable of running their county in a manner desired by those living in the county outside of the city. This is made quite difficult, however, when the county has one of seven votes on the Planning Commission, no votes on the City Council even though it controls the county within the three-mile limit, and one vote out of nine on the Goals and Policies Committee, all of the other votes being what you might consider as city residents.

Concerning urban sprawl and the statement that some type of control is needed so we do not create a bunch of villages — green belts and "new villages" have been found to be the optimum solutions in England, Germany, France and even on our own East Coast.

What is truly called for is an exact definition of "urban sprawl" by the planning department and not this continuous referral to a philosophical bogey-man.

In many cases, Lincoln has prospered by its growth and eventual absorption of outlying villages such as Havelock, College View, Bethany, Cotner and West Lincoln.

Fruits Of Demagoguery

I would like to take Senator Curtis to task for accusing practically everyone of villifying the President unwarrantedly. Without concrete specifics, his generalization is simple demagoguery.

Is he overlooking the fact that a federal grand jury voted 19 to 0 earlier this year to name Mr. Nixon as a conspirator in the Watergate cover-up? This is a fact, not an unwarranted generalization.

We have now seen the fruits of demagoguery and I would like to say to Mr. Curtis — let us stick to the facts.

AMY JENSEN

JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — Postmaster General Ted Klassen, like a kindly old uncle, has been padding the postal payroll with his cronies and former business associates. It's Uncle Sam and the mail users, meanwhile, who pick up the huge payroll tab.

Our continuing investigation into Klassen's shenanigans has now uncovered a payroll boondoggle of major proportions. We found that Klassen's best friend and many of his former business associates have been allowed to feed at the public trough — compliments of the postmaster general.

"Lew Walters hocked his watch to lend me money once," Klassen often brags about his oldest friend. Now, Walters reaps the rewards of his loyalty, collecting a fat consultant fee. What he does is a mystery to practically everyone at the Postal Service, but he rakes in about $24,000 a year for doing it.

The highest paid consultant, however, was Sydney Baron, a former public relations man at American Can, the firm Klassen headed before coming to the Postal Service. Until his contract was cancelled May 9, Baron collected an incredible $500 a day for his work. And for Baron, the Postal Service defined a day when "a reasonable amount of time is spent on Postal Service matters."

Baron, however, is not the only alumnus of American Can who has drawn a fat paycheck. Some of the American Can crowd have formed sort of a preretirement village, hanging on the postal payroll until they accrue enough time to retire with a pension.

Ellsworth Pell, for example, retired from American Can and is now holding down a non-job at the rate of $35,000 a year. Postal sources claim that Pell never made more than $20,000 a year at American Can.

Harold Larsen, another American Can graduate, was slipped into a do-nothing job by Klassen, too. He was started out as New York Regional Postmaster General, but had to be removed for inefficiency. Klassen is now taking care of him at $45,000 a year, with an easier job at headquarters.

WILLIAM H. CARNEY

They Had A Dream

The 54th Massachusetts Regiment, an experiment of sorts, was new in the field and its men were driven by a need to prove their mettle.

The commanding officer of the 54th, Col. Robert Gould Shaw, was a blue-blooded white abolitionist of Boston. His men were black.

There had been opposition to blacks fighting in the Union forces in the Civil War, but a decision was made to see how they would perform as soldiers.

Col. Shaw asked for combat duty for his regiment which was sent to South Carolina and got its first taste of battle in a skirmish near Charleston on July 16.

After two days without rest or rations, the 54th was assigned to lead the assault against Fort Wagner, a fortress on Morris Island which controlled the sea approaches to the city of Charleston.

One of the men who took part in that battle was Sgt. William H. Carney whose valor that day earned him the Congressional Medal of Honor.

Carney was in the vanguard of the 54th, beside the regimental color bearer, when Confederate soldiers behind the parapets of the fortress opened fire.

The color bearer was mortally wounded by the fusillade, but Carney grabbed the flag and led the charge to the walls of the fort.

Carney was wounded twice in the leg and a third time in the head, but he kept the colors flying until he was removed to a field hospital in the rear.

He clung to consciousness, however, until he turned the colors over to regimental comrades with the proud declaration: "Boys, the old flag never touched the ground." After uttering those words, Carney collapsed.

Barely 23 at the time, Carney had been on his own for some eight years. Born in Norfolk, Va., in 1840, he ran away to sea at the age of 15. Later, he settled in New Bedford, Mass. where he enlisted only a few months before the assault on Fort Wagner.

Carney served in the Union Army until the end of the war and then spent five years in California. But he returned to

New Bedford in 1870 and worked as a letter carrier for 31 years.

In 1900, a year before he retired, Carney was belatedly awarded the Medal of Honor for his bravery at Fort Wagner.

The bravery of the 54th in that furious battle was also remembered in other ways. Col. Shaw was killed at Fort Wagner, and a monument honoring him and his men was erected across from the Boston State Capitol.

The flag Carney so lovingly protected in that engagement was enshrined in Boston's Memorial Hall.

Klassen Packing Post Office

"Our continuing investigation into Klassen's shenanigans has now uncovered a payroll boondoggle of major proportions. We found that Klassen's best friend and many of his former business associates have been allowed to feed at the public trough — compliments of the postmaster general."

Blacks and women in the mail system protest that none of their number has made it to the top levels of management. Only five blacks, for example, have hit the $30,000 plateau at the Postal Service.

One of the highest paid women is Peggy Ford, who is Klassen's personal secretary. Sources contend that her $28,000 job is secure, because she knows "where all the bodies are buried." Her husband, a retired military man, is now on the payroll at more than $30,000.

At the same time, postmasters across the nation are being told to tighten their belts. The Postal Service is in financial trouble and cannot yet ask for another rate increase. Klassen is hoping that economies in the field and a friendly Congress will bail him out.

FOOTNOTE: A postal spokesman told my associate Jack Cloberty that Pell, Carlin and Farrell all did necessary jobs at the Postal Service. The spokesman denied that Brown's area was a "dumping ground" and generally defended Klassen's employment practices.

There may be some complaints about the mail, but not from the White House. Postmaster General Ted Klassen told us that he hasn't spoken with President Nixon for well over a year.

If somebody could figure out a way to enforce it, he would probably come up with a license for dying. In view of the enforcement problem, however, licenses are for the living. How lucky can we get?

Latest thing in this category is a city government license for bicycle riders, any who want to take their two-wheelers on an arterial, that is. The idea of the thing is that the licensing would provide a means of education.

To get the license, the cyclist would have to pass an examination, both physical and of his or her knowledge of proper riding practices. The minimum age at which such a license would be available, incidentally, is proposed to be age 14.

Presumably, if a 13-year-old wanted to drive on an arterial, he simply could not do so. If nothing else, that provision in the thing ought to be changed.

But why any license, at all? The education theory is a great one but, in the end, would we have anything more from a practical point of view than another nuisance in our lives?

The license process would require the applicant to memorize a lot of facts that he or she would then promptly forget and/or ignore, just as is the case now with drivers' licenses. How many automobile drivers could pass the driving test six months after they took it without boning up again on the details of the rules of the road?

Not very many of them, judging from the way people drive. Rights-of-way at intersections, for instance, don't mean a thing except as a question on the driving test you have to take. In reality, the right-of-way goes to whoever gets there first, not who has things his way legally.

The streets are loaded with discourteous and bad drivers and the licensing process seems to have no effect upon them, at all.

In the area of bicycling, the idea is even more of an absurdity. The dangers of mixed cars and bicycles are inherent and no licensing program is going to eliminate them.

It's the individual's attitude that really counts and the government can't change that. Bicycle riding licenses are an idea whose time, in our opinion, has not yet come.

Peace Makes Man Fickle

A point all should appreciate is made by the large crowds turning out in Egypt to greet a newfound friend, President Richard M. Nixon of the United States. It was only months ago that Nixon was the epitome of evil in the eyes of the Arabs, a man who represented the war-making machine of the U.S.

That machine helped the enemy, Israel, in its battle for survival in the Middle East. How could a people turn so quickly from dislike and hatred to admiration?

The answer is peace. Because U.S. efforts have contributed to an end to hostilities in the Middle East, the people of Egypt are jubilant and old animosities are forgotten. It is Nixon, the peace-maker, who is being welcomed, not Nixon, the director of a powerful military force.

Perhaps there is yet hope for the world. When people respond to peace rather than war, when they look for local stability rather than military maneuvers, the situation can't be all bad.

In the past, it has been a temptation to wonder if the people of the Middle East really wanted to find the grounds for common existence and universal sovereignty.

The welcome given Nixon tells us peace still has an appeal there beyond the call of war.

This is no guarantee that we can now quit worrying about the Middle East. Egyptian President Anwar Sadat has spoken of a "durable" peace in terms of a settlement of the long-standing Palestinian refugee problem — the problem of those Arabs who have been driven from their homes by Israeli acquisitions of former Arab lands.

Sadat is right in making the distinction he does between what we have in the Middle East and what might ultimately come to be a permanent state of peace. The world has seen its hopes crushed before in the aftermath of agreements that proved to be worth about as much as the paper they were written on.

But if the people of the Middle East can come to have a taste for peace for a long enough time to develop a real appetite for it, the chance of war there will decline. Nixon's presence there at the moment is at least one small contribution to the development of such an appetite.

We Are A Mess

A physician and public health official described America as "the most over-medicated, most over-operated, most over-innoculated country in the entire world."

Dr. Ratner, professor of preventive medicine and public health at Loyola University Medical School of Chicago, and commissioner of Health at Oak Park, Illinois, added that it is also the most anxiety-ridden.

We are flabby, overweight and have lots of dental cavities. Our gastro-intestinal systems operate like a sputtering gas engine. We can't sleep and we can't get along when we are awake. We have neuroses and high blood pressure. Neither our hearts nor our heads last as long as they should. Coronary diseases at the peak of life have hit epidemic proportions. Suicide is one of the leading causes of death.

People in the United States do a tremendous amount of self-drugging with aspirin and other over-the-counter drugs which disorganize the natural chemistry of the body.

That is the whole picture of the average American from a great doctor. Will it take a food shortage to bring us back to health? A shortage of gas will help also. Walking seems to be out of style.

Miracle And New Senators

Our nation and the world we are a part of have been going through some tortuous changes, but it hasn't touched our two Nebraska senators, Hruska and Curtis. They still delay their reading of the "Nixon Transcripts," still vote right down the line with monopoly interests and the Nixon economic disasters. No two U.S. senators in the nation have so consistently failed to represent their home interests so long and so successfully.

Our state's cattle and hog-producers are facing financial ruin. Our popular governor — NOT our congressional representatives — is leading the fight to petition Washington, D.C., to reduce foreign imports of meat. Now comes Mr. Curtis to tell us that he has personal assurances from Mr. Nixon that he will make a study of the meat import problems — maybe to do some "jawboning" on the matter! Wow! What else is new!

At the same minute, Mr. Nixon takes a run-out powder for Europe and the Midwest on a somewhat pointless follow-up to Kissinger's diplomatic triumphs, leaving countless matters of U.S.A. interest unresolved, including those of the farmer and feeder.

With a congressional delegation as impotent as Nebraska's all we need now is a miracle from on high — and two new senators.

Urban Sprawl Desirable

In Mr. Brogren's proposed plan to limit development and home construction in agricultural Lancaster County, he says that the lot size in the county should be increased to five acres. It is difficult to understand why a person wishing to have a home in a rural area should be required to purchase 217,800 square feet of land for one resident, when his city cousin is required to purchase only 6,000 square feet in an A-2 residential area.

The apparent purpose in requiring five acres is to prevent anyone from building on one acre a home with a private sanitary sewer, even though the law now permits a builder to have a private sewer system for one residence on one acre.

For the planning staff to recommend approval, and then ask for denial, based upon the suggested Goals and Policies Plan (which is not an adopted ordinance) certainly appears to be a desire by the city to take over complete control of the county and restrict county growth. Lancaster County has good commissioners and good staffs. They are capable of running their county in a manner desired by those living in the county outside of the city. This is made quite difficult, however, when the county has one of seven votes on the Planning Commission, no votes on the City Council even though it controls the county within the three-mile limit, and one vote out of nine on the Goals and Policies Committee, all of the other votes being what you might consider as city residents.

Concerning urban sprawl and the statement that some type of control is needed so we do not create a bunch of villages — green belts and "new villages" have been found to be the optimum solutions in England, Germany, France and even on our own East Coast.

What is truly called for is an exact definition of "urban sprawl" by the planning department and not this continuous referral to a philosophical bogey-man.

In many cases, Lincoln has prospered by its growth and eventual absorption of outlying villages such as Havelock, College View, Bethany, Cotner and West Lincoln.

Fruits Of Demagoguery

I would like to take Senator Curtis to task for accusing practically everyone of villifying the President unwarrantedly. Without concrete specifics, his generalization is simple demagoguery.

Is he overlooking the fact that a federal grand jury voted 19 to 0 earlier this year to name Mr. Nixon as a conspirator in the Watergate cover-up? This is a fact, not an unwarranted generalization.

We have now seen the fruits of demagoguery and I would like to say to Mr. Curtis — let us stick to the facts.

WASHINGTON — Postmaster General Ted Klassen, like a kindly old uncle, has been padding the postal payroll with his cronies and former business associates.

Our continuing investigation into Klassen's shenanigans has now uncovered a payroll boondoggle of major proportions. We found that Klassen's best friend and many of his former business associates have been allowed to feed at the public trough — compliments of the postmaster general.

"Low Walters hocked his watch to lend me money once," Klassen often brags about his oldest friend. Now, Walters reaps the rewards of his loyalty, collecting a fat consultant fee. What he does is a mystery to practically everyone at the Postal Service, but he rakes in about $24,000 a year for doing it.

The highest paid consultant, however, was Sydney Baron, a former public relations man at American Can, the firm Klassen headed before coming to the Postal Service. Until his contract was cancelled May 9, Baron collected an incredible $500 a day for his work. And for Baron, the Postal Service defined a day

They Had A Dream

The 54th Massachusetts Regiment, an experiment of sorts, was new in the field and its men were driven by a need to prove their mettle.

The commanding officer of the 54th, Col. Robert Gould Shaw, was a blue-blooded white abolitionist of Boston. His men were black.

There had been opposition to blacks fighting in the Union forces in the Civil War, but a decision was made to see how they would perform as soldiers.

Col. Shaw asked for combat duty for his regiment which was sent to South Carolina and got its first taste of battle in a skirmish near Charleston on July 16.

After two days without rest or rations, the 54th was assigned to lead the assault against Fort Wagner, a fortress on Morris Island which controlled the sea approaches to the city of Charleston.

One of the men who took part in that battle was Sgt. William H. Carney whose valor that day earned him the Congressional Medal of Honor.

Carney was in the vanguard of the 54th, beside the regimental color bearer, when Confederate soldiers behind the parapets of the fortress opened fire.

The color bearer was mortally wounded by the fusillade, but Carney grabbed the flag and led the charge to the walls of the fort.

Carney was wounded twice in the leg and a third time in the head, but he kept the colors flying until he was removed to a field hospital in the rear.

He clung to consciousness, however, until he turned the colors over to regimental comrades with the proud declaration: "Boys, the old flag never touched the ground." After uttering those words, Carney collapsed.

Barely 23 at the time, Carney had been on his own for some eight years. Born in Norfolk, Va., in 1840, he ran away to sea at the age of 15. Later, he settled in New Bedford, Mass. where he enlisted only a few months before the assault on Fort Wagner.

Carney served in the Union Army until the end of the war and then spent five years in California. But he returned to

New Bedford in 1870 and worked as a letter carrier for 31 years.

In 1900, a year before he retired, Carney was belatedly awarded the Medal of Honor for his bravery at Fort Wagner.

The bravery of the 54th in that furious battle was also remembered in other ways. Col. Shaw was killed at Fort Wagner, and a monument honoring him and his men was erected across from the Boston State Capitol.

The flag Carney so lovingly protected in that engagement was enshrined in Boston's Memorial Hall.

Resigning, An Art

NEW YORK — The art of resigning from political office — whether to slip or sneak away or go out with a bang — has declined rather seriously in this country in recent years. The people who should resign won't, and the people who shouldn't, threaten to do so.

When the old American politicians of another age differed on principle and policy or felt their "personal honor" required them to resign, they usually went out and slammed the door. But the last really dramatic political exit was Richard Nixon's own Grand Farewell after losing the California governor's race in 1962, and even then, alas, he didn't keep his word.

Henry Kissinger's recent resignation threat has done nothing to restore the art, and was not up to his usual style and wit. He was understandably irritated by charges that he had not been candid and may even have lied about his part in bugging his associates in the White House, but his threat was out of all proportion to the offense.

There are only three effective ways to deal with useful but aggressive reporters like Clark Mollenhof of the Des Moines Register Tribune, who asked Kissinger, with his customary gentility, whether the secretary had in fact initiated the wiretaps. The first way, which Mollenhof prefers, is to give him the keys to the files. The second is to repeal the First Amendment, and the third is to revive and legalize dueling for cases of "personal honor." But all three are a little awkward.

In this particular case, Kissinger somehow misplaced two of his most celebrated qualities — his sense of humor and his gift of logic. He performed like a great actor who threatens to quit the theater because he got a couple of bum reviews or was insulted going out the stage door.

"I do not believe it is possible," he said, "to conduct the foreign policy of the United States . . . when the character and credibility of the secretary of state are at issue. And if it is not cleared up, I will resign."

A QUESTION OF HONOR

This does restore an element of spunk and plain-speaking into our public affairs, but it is not very logical. For these charges against Kissinger have been rumbling in the committees of Congress and the back pages of the papers for years, and somehow, despite them, Kissinger has not only managed "to conduct the foreign policy of the United States," but has presided over one of the most brilliant chapters in the long history of American diplomacy, and has improved almost everything except the Irish question.

Also, if Kissinger thinks he should resign unless his "credibility and character" are restored at once by the Congress, what does he think President Nixon should do facing much more serious and prolonged charges of HIS credibility, character, and violation of the spirit and letter of the Constitution?

Fortunately, the nations of the world, in their dealings with the United States, are not so personal. President Sadat of Egypt, squiring Nixon and Kissinger on a whistle-stop tour from Cairo to Alexandria, was probably not devoting much thought to Chairman Rodino of the judiciary committee or Clark Mollenhof of Iowa, or even to the domestic troubles of Nixon and Kissinger.

Presumably he is dealing with the power and influence and ideals of America, which Kissinger, with his remarkable gifts, has been able to make him see. This is the paradox of the present controversy.

For while America's power and influence have always been there, somehow Kissinger has changed Washington's relations with the Middle East, China and the Soviet Union by the force of his intelligence, personality and character — particularly in his personal relations with Chou En-Lai, Sadat, Faisal, and the leaders of Israel.

He did not do this by himself. Time, geography, and power were the essential ingredients, but Kissinger seized the moment, and it is ridiculous in his own terms and on his own record and objectives, to talk of resignation.

"I have believed," he said, "that I should do what I could to heal the divisions in this country," but he is not likely to do this by resigning at the wrong time and on the wrong issue. So maybe he'd better stick around.

Klassen Packing Post Office

"Our continuing investigation into Klassen's shenanigans has now uncovered a payroll boondoggle of major proportions. We found that Klassen's best friend and many of his former business associates have been allowed to feed at the public trough — compliments of the postmaster general."

when "a reasonable amount of time is spent on Postal Service matters."

Baron, however, is not the only alumnus of American Can who has drawn a fat paycheck. Some of the American Can crowd have formed sort of a preretirement village, hanging on the postal payroll until they accrue enough time to retire with a pension.

Ellsworth Pell, for example, retired from American Can and is now holding down a non-job at the rate of $35,000 a year. Postal sources claim that Pell never made more than $20,000 a year at American Can.

Harold Larsen, another American Can graduate, was slipped into a do-nothing job by Klassen, too. He was started out as New York Regional Postmaster General, but had to be removed for inefficiency. Klassen is now taking care of him at $45,000 a year, with an easier job at headquarters.

Ben Bailar and Darrell Brown are two former American Can men now in the $50,000 neighborhood at the Postal Service. Brown's postal section is used by Klassen as a dumping ground for old cronies he is reluctant to fire.

For example, Len Farrell was demoted from assistant postmaster general for labor relations, but continues to draw a higher salary than his successor. Farrell is hanging on for a pension.

Brown's division also took care of Paul Carlin, who was deposed as a senior assistant postmaster general. Carlin stayed on as an aide to Brown, but still collected about $46,000. The man who took over his duties makes about $43,000.

Meanwhile, middle-level postal hands complain that they cannot get the manpower they need because of budget considerations.

Blacks and women in the mail system protest that none of their number has made it to the top levels of management. Only five blacks, for example, have hit the $30,000 plateau at the Postal Service.

One of the highest paid women is Peggy Ford, who is Klassen's personal secretary. Sources contend that her $26,000 job is secure, because she knows "where all the bodies are buried." Her husband, a retired military man, is now on the payroll at more than $30,000.

At the same time, postmasters across the nation are being told to tighten their belts. The Postal Service is in financial trouble and cannot yet ask for another rate increase. Klassen is hoping that economies in the field and a friendly Congress will bail him out.

FOOTNOTE: A postal spokesman told my associate Jack Ciocherty that Pell, Carlin and Farrell all did necessary jobs at the Postal Service. The spokesman denied that Brown's area was a "dumping ground" and generally defended Klassen's employment practices.

There may be some complaints about the mail, but not from the White House. Postmaster General Ted Klassen told us that he hasn't spoken with President Nixon for well over a year.

DAC OKs Framework For Downtown Planning

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

The Downtown Advisory Committee (DAC) Friday adopted a planning framework which would guide Lincoln's downtown redevelopment over the next 10 to 15 years.

The plan is a composite of past decisions outlining development districts, traffic circulation, parking, pedestrian movement and open space, landscaping and lighting.

DAC did not endorse the city bus and minibus routings proposed by its consultants Barton-Aschman, pending the completion of a transportation study.

Campbell Opposed

The only negative vote adopting the blueprint development plan was registered by DAC member John Campbell who vigorously opposes any reference to de-emphasizing O Street as a traffic carrier.

Campbell said the construction of a mall on O "will put the kiss of death on downtown retailing."

He added, however, he might not oppose the eventual closing of the street if skywalks and additional parking have been provided downtown.

One Alternative

DAC member Bob Magee pointed out that the plan does not state that a mall is the only answer to beautifying the street, but is one of the alternatives listed.

Consultant John Lockner pointed out that by approving the framework, DAC was not committing itself to specific projects. The plan is intended as a guide for deciding "which projects you'll want to address," Lockner informed DAC members.

Nevertheless, Campbell vowed to do "everything in my power" to prevent construction of a mall on O.

In a related action the advisory group approved in a 6-3 vote Councilman Steve Cook's proposed phasing of the Centrum and North Centrum packages.

Centrum Plan

Under the plan, the Centrum, the combination parking garage, bus terminal and retail shops, would be built between 1975-77 in the block bounded by 11th, 12th, N to O.

DAC placed special emphasis on constructing skywalks to link the Centrum with the Brandeis block to the west and the Magee's block to the east.

The second phase calls for the assembling of a North Centrum package between 1977-79 to include parking, retail shops, use of air rights and skywalk connections.

That block is located north of the Centrum, from O to P.

Traffic Stopped

Campbell and County Commissioner Bob Colin opposed the plan since the closing of O to traffic was listed as one alternative.

DAC member Barb Henderson cast a no vote because the proposal did not make a stronger case for pedestrians by closing the street to traffic.

Casting yes votes were DAC members George Williamson, Bruce Nims, Cook, Councilwoman Sue Bailey, Magee and Burnham Yates.

Skywalk OK'd

DAC unanimously adopted Barton-Aschman's guidelines for developing a second level skywalk system in the central business district. The system would include:

—Construction of skywalks primarily at private expense through use of a special assessment on the benefited property owners.

—Leasing of air rights by the city to private developers, for a nominal fee.

—Enclosing the skywalks and constructing the bridges to a minimum width of 14 feet.

Is It Yoga Or Exercise?

By H. J. ANDERSON
Star Staff Writer

Hatha Yoga may be an ancient Hindu ritual based on dormant divine potency, "the serpent power," at the base of the spine.

Or it may be simple calisthenics. Yogi Liliás Folan said it depends on the teacher.

But she's not very concerned with the Hindu and, to her, it's more than calisthenics.

"I want to introduce my students to anything that will make them feel good," she said.

She Teaches On ETV

Ms. Folan teaches Yoga on more than 80 American educational television networks, including Lincoln's. There are about 140 in the country. She was in Lincoln for the annual meeting of Nebraskans for Public Television.

"In my series, I try to take Hatha Yoga and apply it in our lives in 1974," Ms. Folan said.

Sacred religious histories mean nothing if it can't apply to today's needs, she said. But Yoga does apply today, she believes.

Audience Wide

Her mail is one indication, she said. Her audience includes housewives, businessmen, Yoga students, and many inmates in correctional institutions.

The inmates write that they can watch the show, but must wait for space in their cells to do the exercises, she said. So she sends each of them a book, "Liliás, Yoga and You," which they may have with them in their cells for information.

The book, titled after the show, is also out in Braille, with characters posed in the various postures outlined in raised dots. The technique is based on exercises, posture and mind.

Mental and physical health are mutually dependent, she said. For example, she said, she used to find herself "squirrel caging" (going round and round in circles and getting nowhere) until she learned physical techniques to cool down her mind, she said.

"I feel lighter, stronger, cleaner and happier" since practicing Yoga, Ms. Folan said.

The technique originated in eastern monasteries, she said. It entails the meeting of two powers, the forcing of which, according to Hindu teaching, brings full salvation.

It requires complete development of the will, through which the monks could completely control their bodies, then forget about them and concentrate on the divine.

"All that is very interesting," she said. "But I've found Yoga has enriched, not conflicted with, my Christianity. My salvation is the peace and love within my own home."

Ms. Folan lives with her husband and two sons, ages 11 and 14, in Cincinnati, Ohio. The series is taped there.

Ms. Folan said she doesn't think her series could have worked 10 or 15 years ago.

"Today we're much more concerned about an inner conscious, an inner awareness," she said.

Civic Group Asks Pool, Playground

The West O Business Men's Civic Association Friday unanimously adopted its goals for 1975, including requests for construction of a playground and swimming pool in the area.

Members also discussed the "necessity" of having a junior high school in west Lincoln, but no proposal for instruction was made.

The group urged the Parks and Recreation Department to

Two Men Charged In Attempt

Two men were charged in Lancaster County Court Friday in connection with an alleged attempt to withdraw about $5,000 in savings owned by an 82-year-old Lincoln woman.

Marvin Thomas Wheeler, 27, of Omaha, was charged with a count of possessing an instrument bearing a forged endorsement and Merle Dean Wheeler, 35, of 126 S. 28th was charged with two counts of the same offense.

A preliminary hearing on the charges was set for July 18. Bond for each man was set for $1,500.

The two men were arrested Thursday at the First National Bank. Police said five savings certificates were stolen earlier from the woman's home.

DAC OKs Framework For Downtown Planning

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

The Downtown Advisory Committee (DAC) Friday adopted a planning framework which would guide Lincoln's downtown redevelopment over the next 10 to 15 years.

The plan is a composite of past decisions outlining development districts, traffic circulation, parking, pedestrian movement and open space, landscaping and lighting.

DAC did not endorse the city bus and minibus routings proposed by its consultants Barton-Aschman, pending the completion of a transportation study.

Campbell Opposed

The only negative vote adopting the blueprint development plan was registered by DAC member John Campbell who vigorously opposes any reference to de-emphasizing O Street as a traffic carrier.

Campbell said the construction of a mall on O "will put the kiss of death on downtown retailing."

He added, however, he might not oppose the eventual closing of the street if skywalks and additional parking have been provided downtown.

One Alternative

DAC member Bob Magee pointed out that the plan does not state that a mall is the only answer to beautifying the street, but is one of the alternatives listed.

Consultant John Lockner pointed out that by approving the framework, DAC was not committing itself to specific projects. The plan is intended as a guide for deciding "which projects you'll want to address," Lockner informed DAC members.

Nevertheless, Campbell vowed to do "everything in my power" to prevent construction of a mall on O.

In a related action the advisory group approved in a 6-3 vote Councilman Steve Cook's proposed phasing of the Centrum and North Centrum packages.

Centrum Plan

Under the plan, the Centrum, the combination parking garage, bus terminal and retail shops, would be built between 11th, 12th, N to O.

DAC placed special emphasis on constructing skywalks to link the Centrum with the Brandeis block to the west and the Magee's block to the east.

The second phase calls for the assembling of a North Centrum package between 1977-79 to include parking, retail shops, use of air rights and skywalk connections.

That block is located north of the Centrum, from O to P.

Traffic Stopped

Campbell and County Commissioner Bob Colin opposed the plan since the closing of O to traffic was listed as one alternative.

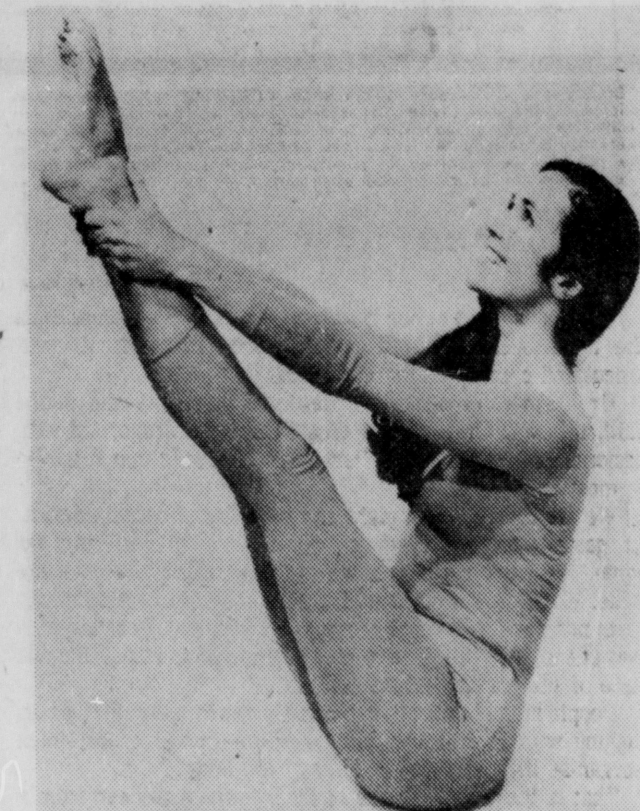

DAC member Barb Henderson cast a no vote because the proposal did not make a stronger case for pedestrians by closing the street to traffic.

Casting yes votes were DAC members George Williamson, Bruce Nims, Cook, Councilwoman Sue Bailey, Magee and Burnham Yates.

Skywalk OK'd

DAC unanimously adopted Barton-Aschman's guidelines for developing a second level skywalk system in the central business district. The system would include:

- Construction of skywalks primarily at private expense through use of a special assessment on the benefited property owners.
- Leasing of air rights by the city to private developers, for a nominal fee.
- Enclosing the skywalks and constructing the bridges to a minimum width of 14 feet.

LILIAS FOLAN... demonstrates Yoga.

Is It Yoga Or Exercise?

By H. J. ANDERSON
Star Staff Writer

Hatha Yoga may be an ancient Hindu ritual based on dormant divine potency, "the serpent power," at the base of the spine.

Or it may be simple calisthenics.

Yogi Liliás Folan said it depends on the teacher.

But she's not very concerned with the Hindu and, to her, it's more than calisthenics.

"I want to introduce my students to anything that will make them feel good," she said.

She Teaches On ETV

Ms. Folan teaches Yoga on more than 80 American educational television networks, including Lincoln's. There are about 140 in the country. She was in Lincoln for the annual meeting of Nebraskans for Public Television.

"In my series, I try to take Hatha Yoga and apply it in our lives in 1974," Ms. Folan said.

Sacred religious histories mean nothing if it can't apply to today's needs, she said. But Yoga does apply today, she believes.

Audience Wide

Her mail is one indication, she said. Her audience includes housewives, businessmen, Yoga students, and many inmates in correctional institutions.

The inmates write that they can watch the show, but must wait for space in their cells to do the exercises, she said. So she sends each of them a book, "Liliás, Yoga and You," which they may have with them in their cells for information.

The book, titled after the show, is also out in Braille, with characters posed in the various postures outlined in raised dots. The technique is based on exercises, posture and mind.

Mental and physical health are mutually dependent, she said. For example, she said, she used to find herself "squirrel caging" (going round and round in circles and getting nowhere) until she learned physical techniques to cool down her mind, she said.

"I feel lighter, stronger, cleaner and happier" since practicing Yoga, Ms. Folan said.

The technique originated in eastern monasteries, she said. It entails the meeting of two powers, the forcing of which, according to Hindu teaching, brings full salvation.

It requires complete development of the will, through which the monks could completely control their bodies, then forget about them and concentrate on the divine.

"All that is very interesting," she said. "But I've found Yoga has enriched, not conflicted with, my Christianity. My salvation is the peace and love within my own home."

Ms. Folan lives with her husband and two sons, ages 11 and 14, in Cincinnati, Ohio. The series is taped there.

Ms. Folan said she doesn't think her series could have worked 10 or 15 years ago.

"Today we're much more concerned about an inner conscious, an inner awareness," she said.

Civic Group Asks Pool, Playground

The West O Business Men's Civic Association Friday unanimously adopted its goals for 1975, including requests for construction of a playground and swimming pool in the area.

Members also discussed the "necessity" of having a junior high school in west Lincoln, but no proposal for instruction was made.

The group urged the Parks and Recreation Department to "make a concerted effort to develop a playground for the children in the western area of the city." It also said the Lakeview School yard should be considered as a site for developing a park.

No location was mentioned for either the playground or swimming pool.

The association also recommended that two feet of blacktop be added to each side of West O Street to prevent erosion of the road's shoulder areas.

A beautification and clean-up campaign in both business and residential areas additionally was approved.

Other recommendations adopted included:

- A study of the traffic pattern in the 1st & O Sts. area to "alleviate the problems caused by the heavy truck traffic."
- The installation of a traffic signal at Coddington and West O Sts. and of a flashing railroad crossing signal on West P.
- The opening of a median for westbound traffic exiting from the Senate Inn's west drive.
- A proposal for members' support of candidates for local and state government, "to afford proper representation of the western areas of the city."

In other action, president T.O. Haas said progress is satisfactory regarding a solution the railroad-motor vehicle conflict at the Burlington Northern Railroad crossing on West O.

Two Men Charged In Attempt

Two men were charged in Lancaster County Court Friday in connection with an alleged attempt to withdraw about $5,000 in savings owned by an 82-year-old Lincoln woman.

Marvin Thomas Wheeler, 27, of Omaha, was charged with a count of possessing an instrument bearing a forged endorsement and Merle Dean Wheeler, 35, of 126 S. 28th was charged with two counts of the same offense.

A preliminary hearing on the charges was set for July 18. Bond for each man was set for $1,500.

The two men were arrested Thursday at the First National Bank. Police said five savings certificates were stolen earlier from the woman's home.

'Your Time Is Up . . .'

Many Lincolniters try to word their way out of those inevitable parking tickets; according to Lincoln Police Department meter maids.

By NANCY HICKS
Star Women's Editor

A local minister who came to Lincoln from the East Coast was praising the friendliness of Nebraskans recently.

Even the police are friendly, he said.

Seeing an officer writing out a parking ticket for his car, he jogged up and tried to talk his way out of the ticket. "I'm just leaving. Really I was just going to move the car."

The officer kept on writing so the minister tried a different approach.

"I'm just a poor preacher."

The officer, depositing the ticket in the minister's hand, replied, "Yes, I know. I heard you preach last Sunday."

Many Lincolniters — from poor preachers to rich old ladies, try to word their way out of those inevitable parking tickets, according to the women who spend their days catching the overparked cars — the Lincoln Police Department meter maids.

And most people are not too original.

The meter maid's modified A-line, calf-length skirt of the late 1950's has been replaced by a more comfortable shorter version, but the excuses people try to hand her remain unchanged.

They range from the illogical, "I pay your wages," and "Give a guy a break" to the truly hostile, "Did you get your quota today?" or a "G... D... Lincoln Fuzz" scream which carries two blocks.

Clerks in Lincoln stores were slow back in the early 1960's when Mrs. Dee Danley and Mrs. Sally Logan, now dispatch operators, were walking their meter maid rounds.

And people are still having problems getting clerks to wait on them, according to Mrs. Marlene Rezek and Miss Cynthia Aksamit, who list slow clerks and long check out lines as the major excuses they hear today.

Here are some of the more typical remarks:
—I saw you at the car, but the light was red, and I couldn't get across the street in time. Didn't you hear me screaming?

—The meter is broken. This meter is too fast.
—But I put my last nickel in it and it cheated me out of 12 minutes.

—I just took my old, sick mother up to the doctor's office. I couldn't have been gone more than four minutes.

—Boy, I had to wait a really long time at the doctor's office.

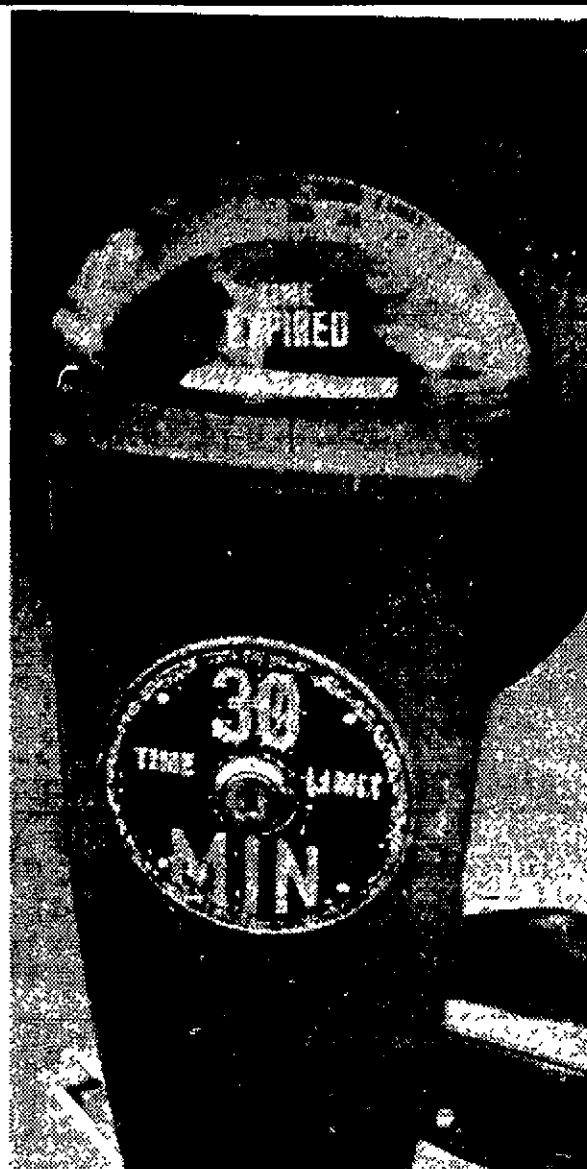

—The elevator stuck.

—Don't you have better things to do with your time?

But perhaps the most unjustified complaint of all is "You girls just hang around the corner waiting for the meter to expire."

With only four meter maids, who have more than four square blocks each to cover, there is no time to linger at corners or meters waiting for the red sign to pop up.

Perhaps the most misunderstood ticket and the one which seems to anger the most people is the extended time violation (feeding the meter once the original time is up), according to those who earn their keep enforcing Lincoln's parking ordinances.

No excuses, not even ignorance, will work. Once the meter maid gets past the date on her ticket pad, there is no hope. She can void a ticket only if it is her error.

Legitimate complaints about nonworking meters, valid excuses with proof to back them up, must be taken to a higher officer at the police department.

One father who had to rush his young son to the doctor after a serious playground accident, did not have time to feed the meter.

The meter maid sympathized, but gave him the ticket. The ticket was voided by officers at the police station after he explained the circumstances.

Though excuses and complaints come from all ages, meter maids have found that women, as a group, seem to be the worst offenders, shouting or getting catty; and people between 45 and 60 years of age seem to be more angered by tickets than those younger or older.

And according to one officer, people in general seem to offer more verbal resistance over a parking ticket than a speeding ticket.

But some hassles are not bad, at least according to Mrs. Logan, who said she had the most fun with "the young guys who thought they were going to charm me out of a ticket." Part of the fun, she admitted with a smile, "was showing them they couldn't."

But the life of the meter maid, who averages around 90 tickets each day, is not filled with hostile over-parkers. In fact most people are really nice, they contend.

It's just that, for that one out of ten, who has already had a bad day and a parking ticket, another citation is just the last straw.

For these few there is philosophical understanding — "They are really just angry at themselves and have to take it out on someone," explained Mrs. Danley.

Metermaids, whose motto is courtesy and common sense, just learn to smile.

And there are things on the job worth smiling about.

One cold, snowy, blowy wintery day, Mrs. Danley wrote up a ticket for an old car with "one of those floppy windshield wipers." When she put the ticket on the car, both the ticket and wiper blew away.

Upset about the owner's possible reaction she hurried to the nearest phone in a parking garage, called the Lieutenant, who told her to void the ticket and let the owner know that the department would pay for the damages.

The owner, who overheard her conversation, was far from angry.

"There's a meter maid with a heart. Don't worry about it; I have another wiper," he told her.

Meter maids do much more than just write tickets. Handy with a coathanger, they help motorists who have locked their keys in the car. They find parents for lost children, help locate misplaced cars, give direction to travelers, help older people out of cars or across streets, occasionally hold a baby for a harried Mom, and sometimes even listen to someone's personal tale of woe during a break in a local restaurant.

"You never know when you turn the corner, who is going to be there, what you're going to be asked or what's going to happen. That's what makes it so interesting," said Mrs. Rezek, a meter-maid for more than four years.

The job, which requires about 11 miles of walking a day in every kind of weather save a blizzard, is also good for health and the figure.

"I was never so healthy in my life as during the time I was a meter maid," said Mrs. Danley. "I seldom had a cold . . . I lost 20 pounds the first six weeks on the job."

Buy Another Double Plot

DEAR ABBY: Here is my story: After 54 years of marriage, my wife died. I bought a double plot — one for her and one for me when my time comes. I couldn't decide on what kind of headstone I wanted for my wife's grave, so I put off buying one.

Meanwhile, I met a woman and things started happening so fast I couldn't believe it. To make a long story short, I married her. In the meantime, my wife's headstone slipped my mind, so my married son got disgusted with me and he bought one and put it up. Then he told me to buy two more lots — one for myself and one for my new wife because he was sure his mother wouldn't want me buried next to her if I couldn't even wait three months to get married again.

I asked him what he planned to do with the empty plot beside his mother, and he said he'd find some other dummy to bury there.

What should I do now?

PUZZLED

DEAR PUZZLED: I'd buy another double plot — unless your present wife has already made plans to double up with someone else when her time comes.

DEAR ABBY: A young woman wrote that she was in love with a fine young man but her mother didn't want her to marry him because he was too short.

You suggested that one should measure a man from his eyebrows up. That isn't low enough. You must go to the base of his heart, for there you will find all of his emotions, including love, which is basic to a man's character.

—Boy, I had to wait a really long time at the doctor's office.

—The elevator stuck.

—Don't you have better things to do with your time?

But perhaps the most unjustified complaint of all is "You girls just hang around the corner waiting for the meter to expire."

With only four meter maids, who have more than four square blocks each to cover, there is no time to linger at corners or meters waiting for the red sign to pop up.

Perhaps the most misunderstood ticket and the one which seems to anger the most people is the extended time violation (feeding the meter once the original time is up), according to those who earn their keep enforcing Lincoln's parking ordinances.

No excuses, not even ignorance, will work. Once the meter maid gets past the date on her ticket pad, there is no hope. She can void a ticket only if it is her error.

Legitimate complaints about nonworking meters, valid excuses with proof to back them up, must be taken to a higher officer at the police department.

One father who had to rush his young son to the doctor after a serious playground accident, did not have time to feed the meter.

The meter maid sympathized, but gave him the ticket. The ticket was voided by officers at the police station after he explained the circumstances.

Though excuses and complaints come from all ages, meter maids have found that women, as a group, seem to be the worst offenders, shouting or getting catty; and people between 45 and 60 years of age seem to be more angered by tickets than those younger or older.

And according to one officer, people in general seem to offer more verbal resistance over a parking ticket than a speeding ticket.

But some hassles are not bad, at least according to Mrs. Logan, who said she had the most fun with "the young guys who thought they were going to charm me out of a ticket." Part of the fun, she admitted with a smile, "was showing them they couldn't."

But the life of the meter maid, who averages around 90 tickets each day, is not filled with hostile over-parkers. In fact most people are really nice, they contend.

It's just that, for that one out of ten, who has already had a bad day and a parking ticket, another citation is just the last straw.

For these few there is philosophical understanding — "They are really just angry at themselves and have to take it out on someone," explained Mrs. Danley.

Metermaids, whose motto is courtesy and common sense, just learn to smile.

And there are things on the job worth smiling about.

One cold, snowy, blowy wintery day, Mrs. Danley wrote up a ticket for an old car with "one of those floppy windshield wipers." When she put the ticket on the car, both the ticket and wiper blew away.

Upset about the owner's possible reaction she hurried to the nearest phone in a parking garage, called the Lieutenant, who told her to void the ticket and let the owner know that the department would pay for the damages.

The owner, who overheard her conversation, was far from angry.

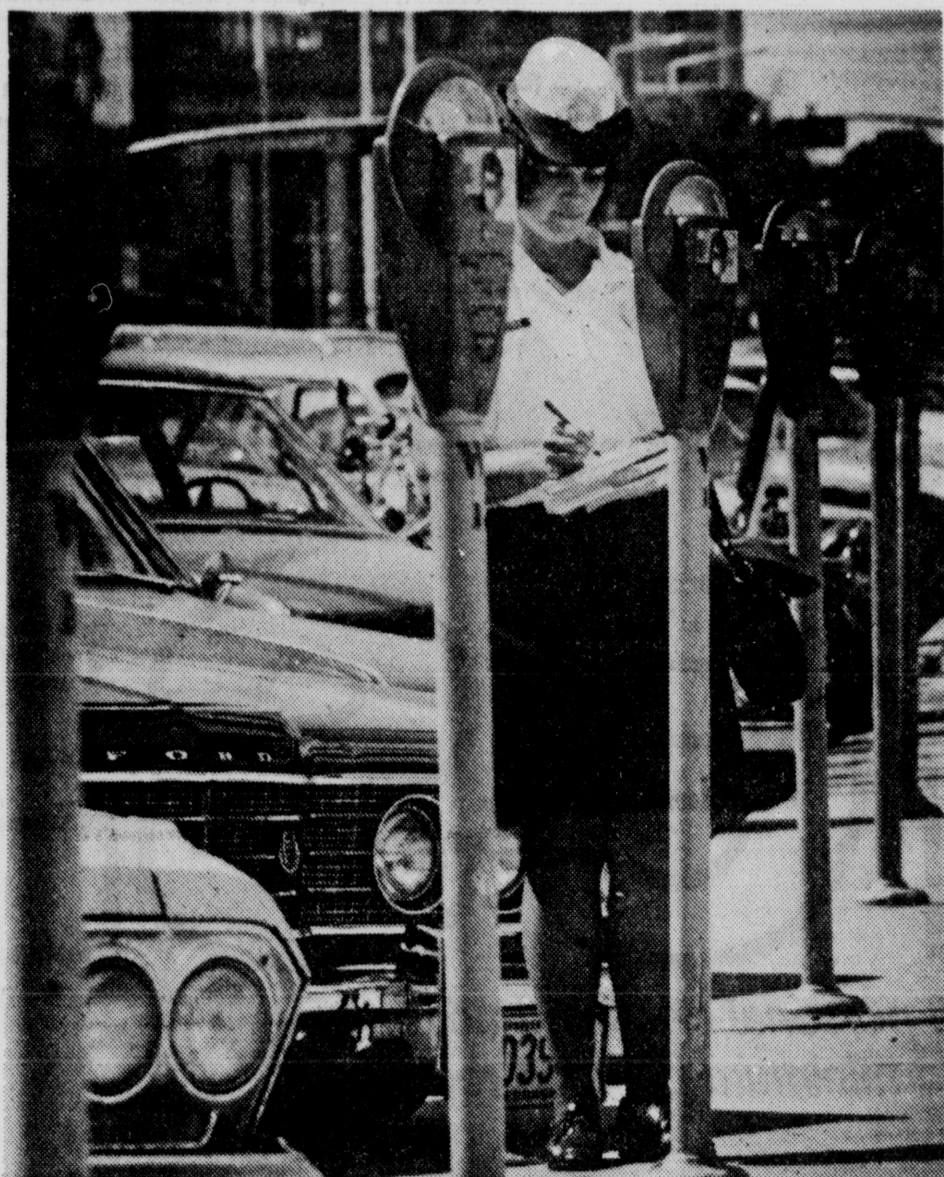

"There's a meter maid with a heart. Don't worry about it; I have another wiper," he told her.

Meter maids do much more than just write tickets. Handy with a coathanger, they help motorists who have locked their keys in the car. They find parents for lost children, help locate misplaced cars, give direction to travelers, help older people out of cars or across streets, occasionally hold a baby for a harried Mom, and sometimes even listen to someone's personal tale of woe during a break in a local restaurant.

"You never know when you turn the corner, who is going to be there, what you're going to be asked or what's going to happen. That's what makes it so interesting," said Mrs. Rezek, a meter-maid for more than four years.

The job, which requires about 11 miles of walking a day in every kind of weather save a blizzard, is also good for health and the figure.

"I was never so healthy in my life as during the time I was a meter maid," said Mrs. Danley. "I seldom had a cold . . . I lost 20 pounds the first six weeks on the job."

Buy Another Double Plot

DEAR ABBY: Here is my story: After 54 years of marriage, my wife died. I bought a double plot — one for her and one for me when my time comes. I couldn't decide on what kind of headstone I wanted for my wife's grave, so I put off buying one.

Meanwhile, I met a woman and things started happening so fast I couldn't believe it. To make a long story short, I married her. In the meantime, my wife's headstone slipped my mind, so my married son got disgusted with me and he bought one and put it up. Then he told me to buy two more lots — one for myself and one for my new wife because he was sure his mother wouldn't want me buried next to her if I couldn't even wait three months to get married again.

I asked him what he planned to do with the empty plot beside his mother, and he said he'd find some other dummy to bury there.

What should I do now?

PUZZLED

DEAR PUZZLED: I'd buy another double plot — unless your present wife has already made plans to double up with someone else when her time comes.

DEAR ABBY: A young woman wrote that she was in love with a fine young man but her mother didn't want her to marry him because he was too short.

You suggested that one should measure a man from his eyebrows up. That isn't low enough. You must go to the base of his heart, for there you will find all of his emotions, including love, which is basic to a man's character.

Bel Kaufman has written, "I was zooming by jet across the country when it suddenly occurred to me that I knew nothing about the pilot or navigator and understood nothing about the mechanics involved in keeping the plane aloft. I was at the mercy of a stranger turning mysterious dials behind a closed door. But I settled back comfortably. It was an act of faith."

Social Studies Seminar Slated For Teachers

A workshop-seminar for social studies teachers will be offered by the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Extension Division in North Platte and South Sioux City this summer.

Dr. Willis Moreland, professor of secondary education in NU Teachers College, will be in charge of the workshop-seminar, which is designed to familiarize classroom teachers with current trends and developments in the social studies.

The first workshop-seminar will be held July 15-19 at North Platte High School, North Platte. The other workshop-seminar will be at South Sioux City High School, South Sioux City, from July 29-Aug. 2. Daily sessions will be from 8:30 a.m.-12 noon and from 12:45 p.m.-4:15 p.m.

Topics in the program will include instructional strategies, values and the social studies, and analysis of curriculum innovation in social studies in current national projects.

Teachers who wish to enroll in one of the workshop-seminars may obtain further information from Richard Sedlacek, 1000 W. 2nd, North Platte (532-5561), or James E. Deignan, 3301 G St., South Sioux City (494-2433).

Meet Star Carrier David Keim

Enthusiastic about his Lincoln Star carrier route, nine-year-old David Keim of Sterling says he intends to keep it for years.

A carrier salesman for nine months, David enjoys his route which has gained him many compliments due to his excellent service.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Mike Keim Sr., David is active in basketball, football, wrestling and hunting and is an outdoor enthusiast. He enjoys water skiing and camping out.

A fourth grader at Sterling Public School, he likes art and drawing.

David enjoys helping his grandfather with farm work and helps his parents with their chicken and egg program which yields more than 200 eggs per day.

His parents feel that the route has helped David organize his time, assume responsibility, meet people and has taught him thrift.

David saves most of the profit from his route of 26 daily and 19 Sunday papers. During the time he has been a carrier salesman he has increased both the daily and Sunday subscriptions by four.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

☆ By SIDNEY OMARR ☆

Forecast For Saturday
Plaintive appeal as I am accosted in elevator by lovely lady. "Please, Mr. Omarr, don't make me a Pisces!" The truth, of course, is that I cannot make anyone any sign — we make ourselves what we are — and living up to our potential, being ourselves, that is the key; no matter what our zodiacal sign. The wistful lady in question had her Moon in Capricorn and she was not a classic Pisces. I would have asked her why she was so adamant against being a Pisces, but the elevator stopped and, as I left, I could hear her sobs. Another of life's mysteries. What could be wrong with Pisces?

ARIES (March 21-April 19): What was double harness could become single. Means joint efforts are subject to breakup. Take special care with partnerships, contracts, legal papers — and marriage. Cycle is high but you have aroused envy — and this will create atmosphere of opposition.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Persons who usually knowledges are quick to action may now be stymied. Assume responsibility. Organize. Check priorities. Be aware of financial situation. Keep eating, working and recreation resolutions. No extremes — or excess!
GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Friendship project. Know when to leave past and step into future. Aries, Libra persons play significant roles. Finish project. Emotional responses dominate. Logic could be kicked aside. Realize you do have to face yourself in morning.
CANCER (June 21-July 22): New approach to business affairs may be necessary. Shakeup is likely in high places. You are directly affected. Display ideas, concepts. Show that you can be independent of past, that you are willing to pioneer, to grasp unique concepts.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You need co-operation in order to obtain what has been tantalizing, a temptation and perhaps a status symbol. Gung alone would not do the trick. Experienced older individual could become an ally. Encourage this trend.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Highlight sociability, versatility and curiosity. Be alive in sense that you examine, question, probe and appreciate. Accent is on flash signs which can lead to whirling profits. Sagittarius, Gemini persons could figure prominently.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Study various points of view. Truth now is not apt to be black or white. You should be aware of varying shades. Specifically, you might go to bed and may be overanxious. Read between the lines.

NETV Panel To Consider New Budget

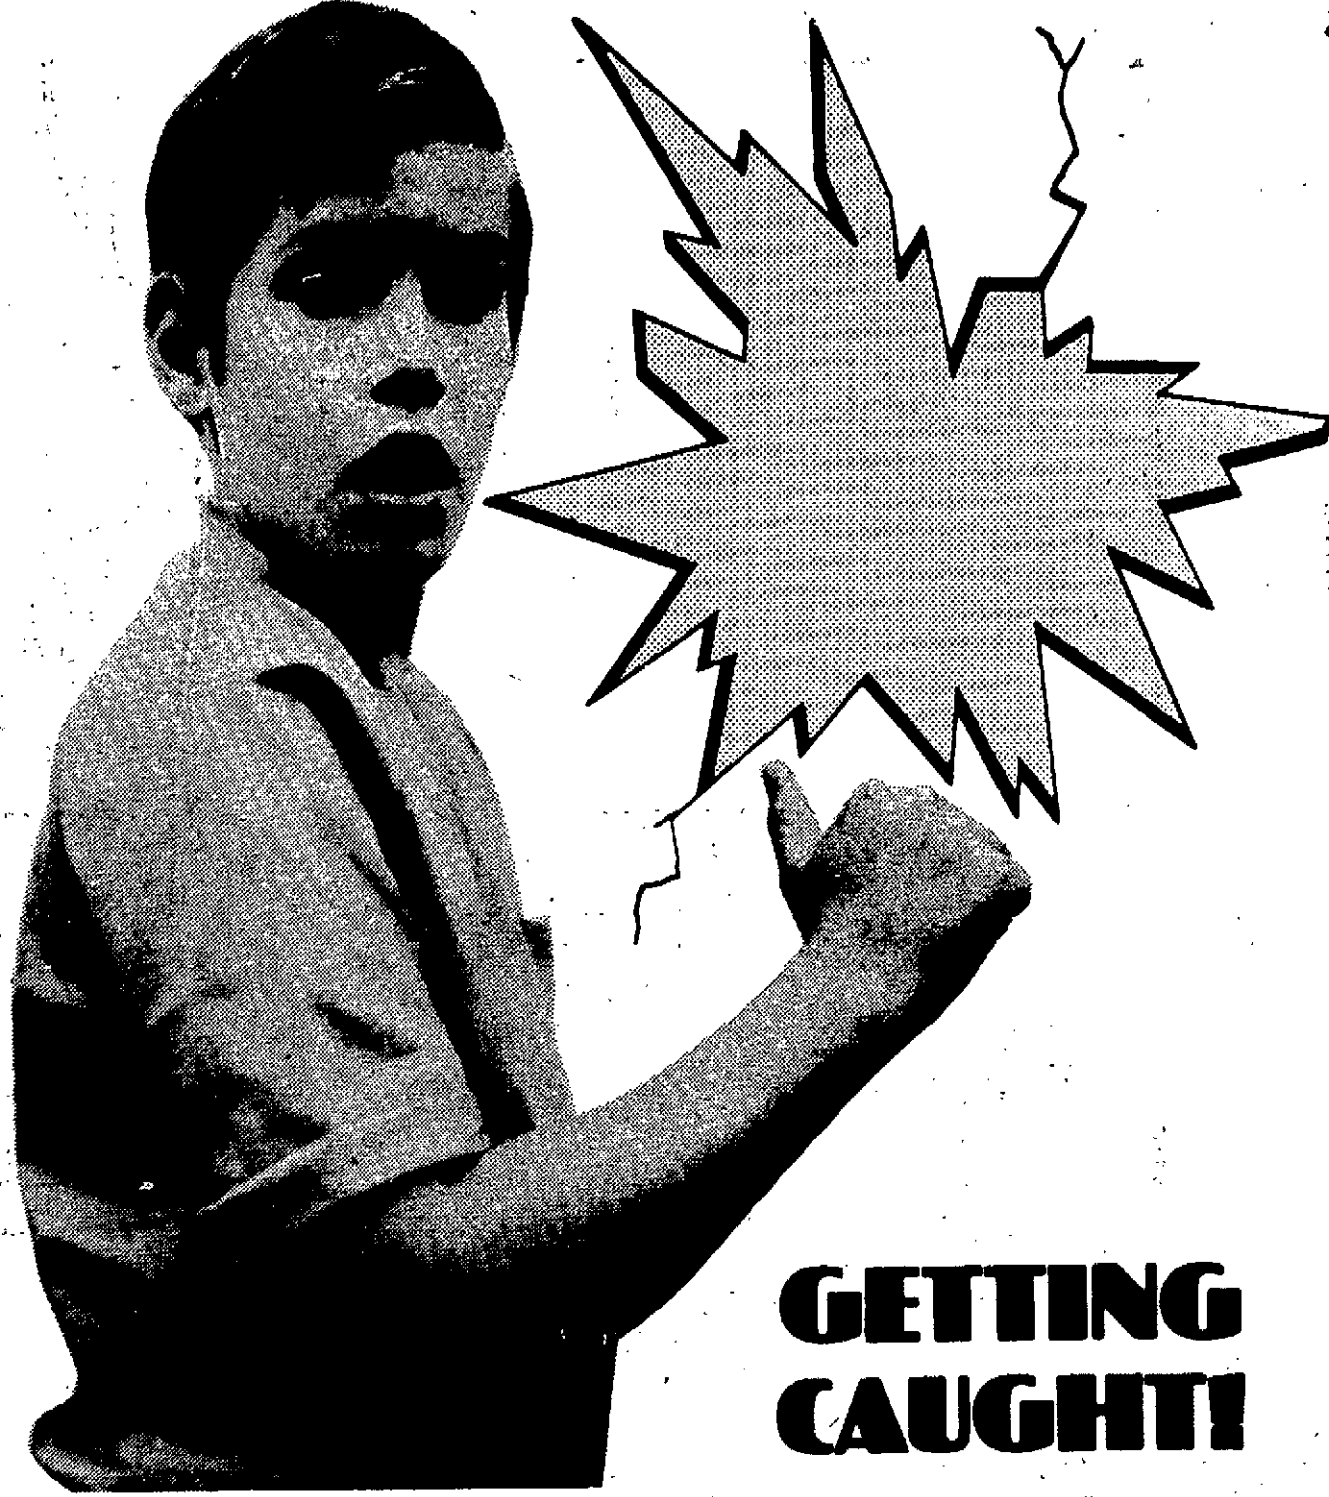

The Nebraska Educational Television Commission will consider the 1974-75 operating budget in a public meeting at 1:30 p.m. Thursday, according to Commission Secretary Jack McBride.

The commission will meet in the board room of the Nebraska Educational Telecommunications Center, 1800 N. 33rd.

Commissioner Philip Heckman, Doane College president, and Nebraska ETV Network Program Manager Ron Hull will report on the national public television program cooperative. Heckman serves on the Public Broadcasting Service (PBS) board of governors.

Commissioner June Popken Brady will report on a regional public television meeting held Thursday and Friday in Chicago, called by the PBS board of governors.

Other agenda items include reports on network programming and operations, including the Ogallala time zone and the weather warning system, and a report of the Nebraskans for Public Television Inc.

GETTING CAUGHT!

When the jelly disappeared from the refrigerator, when a baseball shattered the window, when Mother discovered the stray cat sleeping in her washbasket . . . like a magnetic needle the accusing finger of my parents pointed toward me.

It's a crushing experience to get caught. But it can teach us a vital lesson. We soon discover a sense of responsibility and learn our obligation to others. Our true identity emerges.

The Church stands ready to help us learn responsibility. Through religious education youth today can still discover personal identity—while gaining a responsible view of man's obligations to God and to society.

Some Trust Everyone

HAVE YOU NOTICED that some people tend to trust everyone, while others tend to be suspicious? Some elders insist experience has taught them to trust no one. But many will say time has strengthened their faith in others.

Bel Kaufman has written, "I was zooming by jet across the country when it suddenly occurred to me that I knew nothing about the pilot or navigator and understood nothing about the mechanics involved in keeping the plane aloft. I was at the mercy of a stranger turning mysterious dials behind a closed door. But I settled back comfortably. It was an act of faith."

Her comment got me to thinking that all of us engage in acts of faith daily. When we step into an elevator we have faith those who built it knew what they were doing and that it will not hurtle us to the ground. When we go into a restaurant we have faith that the food is pure and that the personnel have not contrived to poison us.

When we cross with the green light we trust that drivers of approaching cars will stop and let us cross safely. When we board a train we have faith that the tracks are clear. And when we go to doctors we trust that the chemicals and treatments they administer will cause us to bloom rather than wilt.

It's possible to become too trusting, and we must always combine faith with common sense. But if we want to enjoy peace of mind as we grow older it's to our advantage to believe that mankind is good and that virtually all those we encounter treat people as they themselves would like to be treated by others.

THIS COLUMN LOVES STORIES about folks past 40 who rise above their problems. We recently learned about Mrs. Louise Ryan, 77, of Miramar, Fla., who was left a widow just before reaching 40. She had little money and two small children, and felt very low in spirits.

But she took any honest job that came along, saved her money, put her children through school and then, in 1945, when they were grown and married, she bought a three-bedroom house on a one-acre plot.

To help meet mortgage payments she rented out two bedrooms of her home and improved the property. After a few years she added a two-room efficiency apartment on one side of the house, and later a three-room efficiency on the other side. After a few years she built herself a new duplex.

What makes her story particularly interesting is that she did much of the work herself. She learned to mix and pour concrete. She nailed rock lath to the walls and tiled the kitchens and baths. "I asked charity from no one," she told me, "and am proud to tell you my name is on the map of Miami because I donated a small strip of land to the city to widen 54th St., as a gift of appreciation, and they call it the Ryan Sub-division. I think life can be wonderful if you take a positive attitude, are not afraid to work, and have a goal of self-sufficiency."

Voluntary Limit Agreements Should Slow Beef Imports—Martin

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

North Platte — Ranchers attending the Nebraska Stock Growers Association convention here Friday finally got some good news in an otherwise dim picture of the future of the beef industry.

Rep. Dave Martin, R-Neb., told the group that the Nixon administration is moving to slow beef imports from other nations through voluntary agreements to limit their meat exports to the U.S.

"The Department of Agriculture has already completed arrangements to limit exports of beef to the U.S. with governments of Australia and Ireland," he said.

Canada Negotiates
Martin also predicted that an announcement of successful negotiations with Canada to allow American live cattle to be exported to Canada would be announced in a day or two.

"The problem of getting beef in the carcass moved to Canada is a tougher problem, but I understand that this, too, will be solved within the next two weeks," he added.

Last year the Canadian livestock buyers purchased an average of 60,000 or more American cattle per month.

Martin said the Agriculture Department is also negotiating with New Zealand and a number of other nations that export meat to the U.S. seeking agreements to limit their meat exports.

Voluntary Route Preferred
"President Nixon and Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz feel that the voluntary route to limiting imports is preferable to re-establishing quotas on meat imports. The quotas would only cut 20 million pounds of meat from the 1,354,000,000 pounds that we import now," Martin said.

"I couldn't get the administration to reinstate the quotas, so I have introduced a bill which would freeze meat imports entirely for six months. This would really help the industry more than putting the quota system back into action," he said.

Martin received a standing ovation from the ranchers in appreciation for his 14 years of service in Congress.

The stock growers organization completely overhauled their policies during the convention, retesting all the resolutions passed in previous years and instituting a policy that would automatically reexamine any resolution more than five years old.

Fire Danger
In the form of a resolution, the group opposed development of a wilderness area in the Sandhills, because of the danger of grassland fires developing in ungrazed areas.

Resolutions favored by the stock growers included:

- The issuing of grazing permits for unused grassland at Fort Robinson in an effort to reduce fire hazard by having the grass harvested by livestock.
- State control of water resources.
- Balanced federal budget.
- Higher exemption of federal estate taxes than the present 560,000.
- Valuing land in estate tax calculation on the basis of agricultural production.
- Continued study to simplify the formula used in arriving at land tax valuations by the state tax commission office.

- Efforts of State Department of Agriculture and the State Game and Parks Commission to control predators.
- Continued use of hot brands for identification of cattle, but asked that freeze brands be allowed for within-herd identification on the shoulder of the same side as the owner's recorded brand.
- Studies at both the national and state levels of the advisability of mandatory check-off programs to produce funds for use in promoting beef with a provision that the promotion be limited to American produced beef.
- The reinstatement of quotas on beef imports.
- Increased promotion program for the use of leather.
- New beef grading program developed by the American National Cattlemen's Association.
- Asking the Board of Educational Lands and Funds to take steps to control gophers, weeds and other pests on state-owned educational lands.

Boys State Ends; Flag Honored

"You make me feel good to be the Red, White and Blue of the U.S.," the American flag confided, beaming in the closing moments Friday of the 1974 Cornhusker Boys State.

The flag spoke through William E. Galbraith, regional office director of the U.S. Department of Agriculture in Kansas City, who charged 400 departing Boys Staters to "remember the principles of America."

Friday, appropriately, was Flag Day, the end of the week-long experience in state government that culminated with the inauguration of Boys State Gov. Tim Green of Omaha.

"This is the biggest thing that's happened to me," Green said in his inaugural address. He thanked the sponsoring American Legion "for all they have done for us here," and called for a year of support from his fellow delegates.

Makes Pledge
He pledged "to tell the people about Boys State" and what youth believe about current governmental issues, before returning to reside over the 1975 Boys State.

The boys responded with raucous rounds of applause to each award and speaker, in an hour of good old-fashioned patriotism.

"I am the flag," Galbraith said, "that respects you as the citizen of my land," that has "compassion for those who have doubts" and who "bemoan and bemoan that there are many things wrong in America."

A former American Legion national commander, Galbraith said that although America in this century has not enjoyed outstanding leadership, "most things that seem insurmountable can be remedied."

Boys Charged
The Beemer area native charged the Boys Staters to use good judgment, honesty and sincerity to overcome ignorance and cowardliness.

Galbraith said he hoped the Boys State programs "will give you a better ability" to deal with government, and sustain the

Cattle Feeders Set Price Base

South Sioux City (AP) — Hundreds of cattle feeders signed a pledge Friday night not to sell any choice grade steers weighing over 1,200 pounds for less than 40 cents a pound.

Over 1,000 cattle feeders from a 10-state area representing a million head of cattle attended an emergency meeting here to find a solution to declining cattle prices.

"This is not price fixing. This is not a holding action. Let's call this price leadership," said Clarence Vos, a Kingsley, Iowa, cattle feeder.

Vos said this is the last chance many of the cattle feeders have. Cattle feeders are now getting 34 cents to 35 cents a pound, taking a loss of about $200 per head at the market.

"We can't survive much longer," he said. "We have to unite or we're finished."

The "price leadership" is effective midnight Sunday and will continue until further notice.

"They've got us with our backs to the wall. It is the end of our rope," Vos told the cattle feeders. "We're always on the defensive and we've been pushed around too long. A lot of cattle feeders are getting short-tempered and we've got to help ourselves."

Before the conference, John Trotman of Montgomery, Ala., a former head of the National Cattlemen's Association, told newsmen an ill-advised freeze on meat prices and, to some extent, the truckers' strike are major factors in the declining cattle prices.

Trotman was asked during a news conference if he would support a call for the resignation of U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz.

"Up until now I've been a great believer in Butz," he said. But he said he was assured Butz "will go down as one of the great secretaries of agriculture."

"We sometimes become very emotional in times of crisis," he said, and hoped there would be no loud cry for Butz's resignation.

Glen Gregg, president of the Sioux County, Iowa, Cattlemen's Association, said cattlemen are marketing under a panic situation.

"Right now cattlemen are liquidating their herds," he said. Nebraska State Sen. John De Camp told newsmen that the cattle industry in Antelope County, one of Nebraska's largest cattle producing counties, may be beyond recovery.

Nebraska Gas Price Rises .2¢ Per Gallon

Omaha (AP) — The Cornhusker Motor Club reported Friday the average price of regular gasoline in Nebraska crept up two-tenths of a cent to 56.2 cents per gallon during the past week.

The price for premium increased one-tenth of a cent to 60.3.

The club said the national averages were 56 cents and 60 cents.

The lowest reported price in Nebraska for regular gasoline was 47.9 cents per gallon, and the highest was 60.6.

The weekly report said a survey of 63 service stations showed fuel availability was good across Nebraska.

Forty-six per cent of the stations surveyed said they were remaining open on Sunday, and 60% were open after 7 p.m. on weekdays.

Mayor Resigns After Eight Days

Plainview (AP) — Plainview's newly-elected mayor, Gene F. Meyers, resigned Thursday, after only eight days in office.

Meyers said he resigned in an effort to avoid having to authorize $170,000 in general revenue bonds to finance improvements at the local hospital.

The resignation becomes effective immediately.

Stockmen Ask Import Restraints

North Platte (AP) — The Nebraska Stock Growers Association gave unanimous support Friday to a resolution calling for restoration of import restraints under the Meat Import Act of 1964.

The resolution called for restraints to limit what current projections say will be imports of nearly 1.6-billion pounds of beef in 1974.

Also approved by the association was a resolution calling for a study on possible automatic mandatory check-offs on all cattle sold in Nebraska. The present voluntary plan, it was said, does not provide enough funding for promotion and research.

The Stock Growers Association also called for a simplification of tax appraisal manuals to assure more uniform assessment of property throughout the state.

Another resolution called for the establishment of a new grade of beef to include the top of present good grade. The remainder of the good grade and the standard grade would then be lumped into a new category.

The Junior Stock Growers elected officers Friday.

Elected were Jerry Cunningham of Broadwater, president; Loretta Doyle, Stapleton, vice president; Kay Brogan, Keystone, secretary treasurer; and Tracey Grausz and Brent Carter, both of Chappell, historians.

Recipients of citizenship trophies, selected by voting among the 40 boys in each of the mythical Boys State towns, are: John Minnick, Lincoln (Alamo); Alan Shaw, Lincoln (Bunker Hill); Ernie Harpster, Omaha (Manila Bay); Tom Tomasek, Grand Island (Valley Forge); John Ingram, Omaha (Bataan); Steve Astuto, North Platte (Yorktown); Brian Horn, Omaha (Belleau Wood); Mark Hruska, Ulysses (Gettysburg); Jay Matzke, Sidney (Guadalcanal), and Russ Peterson, Minnatare (Midway).

Bill Arnold of Grand Island was named the outstanding athlete of the 1974 Cornhusker Boys State, based on competition in pentathlon events. Arnold was a Bunker Hill citizen.

Dale Zeisler of Emerson, mayor of Boys State's Yorktown, accepted the first-place "outstanding town" award. Alamo placed second, and Gettysburg, third.

Police Ask Leads In Search For Murderer

A special post office box has been established to encourage citizens to send information on the abduction and murder of Patricia Webb, Lancaster County Atty. Paul Douglas said Friday.

Persons having any information which may relate to the crime are urged to write to the Lincoln Police Department, P.O. Box 80041, Lincoln, Neb., 68501, or call Lincoln police at 477-7111.

"We have a lot of leads that are not completed, but we think a lot more leads are not coming to us, that there is a lot of information that is not coming to us," Douglas said.

"We're still optimistic," Douglas said. He said answers to questions such as the motive of the assailant, his or her identity and location of the murder appear to be intertwined.

All those questions, he said, are still unanswered.

The woman's body, clad only in a large man's blue jacket, was found April 20 on a farmyard near Hallam about 20 miles south of Lincoln. She had been

Marvel Suggests TV Debates, Not Spots

By United Press International

State Sen. Richard Marvel of Hastings Friday asked his gubernatorial rival, Gov. J. James Exon, to forget about saturation political television spots during the upcoming campaign in favor of three one-hour debates.

In a letter delivered by hand to the governor, Marvel said, "in this Watergate era, it is my suggestion that if you agree to this series, each of us forego the purchase of any additional television time."

"It is incumbent upon us to prove to the voters that neither you or I are out to buy the governor's office."

Marvel said purchases of TV time usually make up the major portion of campaign expenses and elimination of this cost would save contributors' money, and the candidates would "be running for office on the basis of our merits and stand on issues—not on our pocketbooks."

Turkey Days Plans Near Completion

Oxford — This community annual Turkey Days celebration is set for June 27, 28 and 29 with plans nearing completion. One new event this year is a horseshoe pitching contest to be held in the Oxford Park at 8 p.m. June 27. Another new event this year is a model airplane show by the Mid-Nebraska Radio Controlled Association, scheduled for 2 p.m. June 28. Other events on the agenda include a 4-H horse and cattle showing, tasting tea, talent show, soap box derby, parades, races, dances, hobby and art show, flower show and bingo.

Mirage Flats Dam Dedication Sunday

Scottsbluff — The Mirage Flats Flood Control Dam will be dedicated as a Resource, Conservation, Development and Planning Council project Sunday at 2 p.m. State Sen. Leslie Stull of Alliance and Stan Juefs of Kimball, RCD&PC president, will be among the guests at the ceremonies atop the $143,000 structure.

More Nebraskans Receiving Food Stamps

Chicago (UPI) — An estimated 50,400 low-income persons in Nebraska received food aid through the food stamp program during February, the U.S. Department of Agriculture said Friday. This was an increase of nearly 1,700 from January, according to Dennis M. Doyle, midwest regional administrator of the food and nutrition service. Participants in 89 projects paid around $650,000 for food stamps valued at more than $1,561,000, Doyle said.

Fewer Cattle In Feedlots This Year

The number of cattle in Nebraska feedlots was 15% lower June 1 than it was a year ago, according to the State-Federal Division of Agricultural Statistics. The number of cattle on feed dropped 7% from a month earlier. The number of cattle brought to feedlots for fattening in May was down 33% from a year ago, and down 25% from April.

Hanzlik: 90% Americans Out Of Shape

Omaha (AP) — The president of the American Physical Fitness group said 90% of Americans are out of shape. Speaking to Omaha Lions Club, Robert Hanzlik said isometric exercises will build strength without moving muscles. He said it only takes five minutes a day to exercise, but motivation is the key. "People give more body maintenance to their homes and cars than they give themselves," he said.

Rev. Nelson Accepts Wolbach Pastorate

Wolbach — The Rev. Donald Nelson will be installed as pastor of Trinity Lutheran Church here Sunday, June 30, at 8 p.m. Installing pastor will be Dr. D. A. Flesner, director of the graduate school at Northwestern Lutheran Theological Seminary at St. Paul, Minn. A native of Council Bluffs, Iowa, he was graduated last month from Northwestern Theological Seminary at St. Paul, Minn., and was ordained at St. John's Lutheran Church in Council Bluffs.

Training Site May Expand

By The Associated Press

The Nebraska Crime Commission will consider a recommendation June 28 to expand the state's Law Enforcement Training Center in Grand Island or relocate the facility there.

The recommendation has been made by the Police Standards Advisory Council, the policy-making body of the center.

The council recommended that Donald G. Webb, training center director, work with Grand Island representatives on a plan to expand the existing site or build on a site north of the city.

He said the center needs dorm space for 120 officers and for women officers; three classrooms, 12,000 square feet of administrative space; an auditorium that seats 130, an indoor and outdoor firing range and a vehicle driving range.

Cedar Bluffs — There's something infectious about these kids' innocent spontaneity that gets the volunteers and staff all caught up in the fun and games.

"These people really get to you, they really do," enthuses camp director Dorothy Lugee of the Lincoln Park and Recreation Dept. "They're not inhibited; they're not phony; they don't play any games."

"It's great the way they tell you how they feel about you. You know how you stand with them."

"I Love You"

That was obvious as a little blonde girl reached over as this reporter took notes and planted a wet kiss on his left cheek. "I love you," she said.

Another camper, a tall young man, came up and smilingly introduced himself three times. A third, a friendly, stout young fellow, wanted his picture taken for the newspaper — and then had an attack of the bashfuls.

Even employees of the host camp (Camp Calvin Crest), although not directly involved with the Lincoln camping program, became involved willingly when the kids come for their week of camping every summer.

"After this camp leaves, it's all we talk about the rest of the summer," says Calvin Crest staffer Jim Koonz. "It's the high point of the summer for us. We really feel as though we become a part of the camp — we hate to see them leave."

Dorothy Lugee's five staffers obviously love the 46 kids, or they'd probably be working somewhere else, making more money.

But PE instructor Mike Crawford and his assistant Helena Drzewicki, arts and crafts teacher Joanne James and nurse Marilyn Wagner have too much fun to pass it all up.

Mike Crawford and Joanne James both started with Mrs. Lugee as camp volunteers seven years ago. Obviously "these people" really "got to them," in Mrs. Lugee's words.

50% Will Change

"I'm willing to bet that 50% of my volunteers change their majors and go into special ed," says Mrs. Lugee.

Frank Seane, smearing fellow volunteer Karee Shoner's face with green paint to the great delight of several kids, unintentionally demonstrates the effect the fun-loving campers have on 19 volunteers.

All of them are junior and senior high school students except for a Concordia Teachers College Student, a holder of a master's degree and two interns. The volunteers had three days of orientation with Mrs. Lugee last week to prepare for their uninhibited charges.

The kids accept all comers as their own, including 62-year-old Art Weber, a Nebraska Special Olympics swimming and track champion who cavors with the kids and does double flips off the diving board. The annual camping trip is his vacation, Mrs. Lugee says.

It's the sixth year for the program, funded by the Lincoln Park and Recreation Dept. Campers are referred by General Arnold and Hayward Schools, special ed teachers, the Regional Center, and LOMR — which supervises adults like Art Weber who live in apartments.

Activities include swimming, arts and crafts, nature study, phys ed, lots of games; a chance to see chinchillas, salamanders, turtles, snakes and other critters brought by Chet Ager Nature Center director Dr. Esther Bennet; and a last-night talent show in which each cabin presents a skit.

"They're usually a takeoff on the staff," says Mrs. Lugee, grinning in anticipation.

Food Stamp Office Robbed

Omaha (AP) — An undetermined amount of stamps and cash was taken from the Omaha National Bank's Food Stamp Office in downtown Omaha Friday.

Police described the robber as a man in his late 50s about 5-9 and weighing 170 pounds.

Bank vice president Tom Cooper said the man ordered two clerks to hand over money and stamp books and lie on the floor. It was not known how he escaped.

Police Ask Leads In Search For Murderer

A special post office box has been established to encourage citizens to send information on the abduction and murder of Patricia Webb, Lancaster County Atty. Paul Douglas said Friday.

Persons having any information which may relate to the crime are urged to write to the Lincoln Police Department, questions such as the motive of the assailant, his or her identity and location of the murder appear to be intertwined.

All those questions, he said, are still unanswered.

The woman's body, clad only in a large man's blue jacket, was found April 20 on a farmyard near Hallam about 20 miles south of Lincoln. She had been

Food Stamp Office Robbed

Omaha (AP) — An undetermined amount of stamps and cash was taken from the Omaha National Bank's Food Stamp office in downtown Omaha Friday.

The man was carrying a sawed-off shotgun and a shopping bag.

A bank official said there wasn't much money in the office.

Police described the robber as a man in his late 50s about 5-9 and weighing 170 pounds.

Bank vice president Tom Cooper said the man ordered two clerks to hand over money and stamp books and lie on the floor. It was not known how he escaped.

YD Plans To Canvass For Telethon

The Lancaster County Young Democrats have announced they will canvass the county to make citizens aware of Telethon III, a nationwide fund-raising event of the Democratic Party.

The canvassing will be prior to the telethon, which will be telecast June 29 and 30.

YD members have targeted precincts and will drop off envelopes with contributors. The return mail deadline for contributions is June 25. Of the local donations, one-third will be earmarked for use by the national party, while the rest will go to the Lancaster County organization.

"If citizens want to have better government and want to see America headed in the right direction, this is our chance to show we care by supporting the Democratic party and Telethon III," said Joan Tomlinson, Lancaster County YD president.

Ms. Tomlinson said persons interested in volunteering to work on Lincoln phone banks during the telethon should call 475-4584.

Moscow (AP) — Premier Alexei N. Kosygin defended Soviet-American cooperation as a bulwark of world peace, and rejected China's charges of superpower collusion.

Dyas Says Nixon Finally Aware Producers Unhappy

Democratic congressional nominee Hess Dyas of Lincoln Friday said the national administration is "at last... aware that there are some mighty unhappy beef and hog producers out here."

But, Dyas said, "now that the administration has recognized the plight of meat producers, we're still being told that little or nothing will be done about it."

Dyas said "a negative farm policy" and "rampant indifference to meat producers" typifies the program offered by the Nixon administration and supported by his opponent, Republican Congressman Charles Thone.

Dyas also said Friday he has signed a code of fair campaign practices which stresses issue-oriented campaigning.

Weaver To Head GOP For Exon
The son of a former GOP governor will head a "Republicans for Exon" organization, it was announced Friday.

Arthur J. Weaver said he would chair the organization for Democratic Gov. J. James Exon because "Exon has done an outstanding job for all citizens during his first term in office."

Weaver, of Lincoln, said he had been a delegate to five Republican national conventions, and in 1960 served as a special ambassador to one of the African nations for President Eisenhower.

"I have already had pledges from numerous Republicans who wish to be involved in this effort and I invite and urge all Republicans interested to volunteer their services to the organizations," Weaver said.

Exon will face Republican Richard Marvel in the November general election.

Court Clerk Appointed Asst. Attorney General

Mrs. Marilyn Hutchinson, a law clerk for Nebraska Supreme Court Judge Hale McCown, has been named an assistant attorney general, replacing Mrs. Betsy Berger.

Atty. Gen. Clarence A. H. Meyer said Mrs. Hutchinson, a 1970 University of Nebraska Law School graduate, will be assigned to appellate work before the State Supreme Court and trial work in the federal courts. Meyer said she will also serve as

NFL Players Seriously Claim Strike May Materialize In July

Washington (AP) — The National Football League Players Association said Friday the union is quite serious about a strike and will do all it can legally to prevent rookies and free agents from going to training camp.

"We hope we can avoid it (a strike)," Ed Garvey, union executive director, told a news conference. "We don't think it is good for the players, the owners or the fans."

He said a strike, if it comes, would begin July 1, a few days before the training camps open.

Garvey, with Kermit Alexander, NFLPA vice president and Philadelphia Eagle defensive back, and George Burman, former Washington Redskins center and economics consultant to the union, talked to newsmen about the three days of meetings in New York with the NFL Management Council, the owners' bargaining unit, that ended Thursday.

"We really thought when we left this room last week, they were going to give us counter proposals," said Garvey, referring to a meeting held in Washington last week. "But they just sat there. They refused to give us any counter proposals."

"Unless we get a response, the meetings

The players and owners are scheduled to meet in Washington Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday on the 63 contract demands the union made. Originally, the association made 57 demands and then added 33 more. The group rewrote them, consolidating the 90 into 63.

The major thrust of the union's demands are the so-called nine "freedom issues" which essentially would give the players the opportunity to move from one team to another after his contract expired.

Garvey said the owners "absolutely refuse to give counter-proposals. They have yet to engage in good faith bargaining. All they say is 'You change your demands and come back to us.' They have responded to only one demand, the union shop, and they rejected it."

Garvey said of the New York meetings: "Temper got really hot yesterday. It was not a pleasant situation."

The executive director described as an "arrogant statement" comments by Max Winter, president of the Minnesota Vikings, that "I expect the players to strike this summer. We're going to play the 1974 season whether they do or not. They can strike but they can't prevent us from signing football players, even if they are sub-caliber by NFL standards."

Garvey: "We're not going to allow rookies to play, it's not fair to the fans. We're going to have to set up picket lines and close down the camps."

"We're not going to be able to hold every rookie out. First off, we don't even know who they are. They haven't told us who they have signed. So if there is a strike, it won't be 100 per cent."

"But we'll have the veterans at the camps explaining to the rookies what the strike is all about. The guys coming out of college will find out what the issues are."

Trojans Triumph, 7-2

By DAVE SITTLER

Omaha — Proud and confident Southern California moved into the finals of the College World Series for the fifth straight year Friday night with an easy 7-2 win over Southern Illinois University.

Although outbait by the Salukis nine to six, the Trojans — as they've done the entire series — put together a few hits in key spots to gain the championship game against No. 1 rated Miami Saturday at 7:30 p.m.

Coach Rod Dedeaux's Trojans were led by senior pitcher Mark Barr. Although Barr allowed nine hits, the 6-3, 200-pounder was able to continually stay out of serious trouble.

"I was just trying to keep the ball around the plate and let the defense do the rest," Barr said. "I didn't care how many runs they (Southern Illinois) got because I knew I had a hell of defense backing me up."

The Trojan defense, led by all-American third baseman Rich Dauer, pulled off three double plays against the Salukis to aid Barr's cause.

"They (Southern Cal's defense) really had more double plays than that (three)," Barr said. "I think the umpires took a

"I've always had trouble for some reason in the first inning," Barr explained after upping his season mark to 10-1. "I don't know if I warm up to long and get tired, or not enough."

Barr had little to worry about when his teammates got their first chance at the plate. The four-time defending national champions came up with five runs in the first inning to leave little doubt of the outcome.

The Trojans jumped on Southern Illinois starter Bill Dunning as Creighton Tevin walked, Marvin Cobb singled, Dauer scizzed scoring Tevin and Steve Kemp walked.

That was all for Dunning, who failed to get an out. Ron Hodges replaced Dunning, but the Trojans continued scoring via a Southern Illinois error, a sacrifice fly and a double by Mark Carpenter.

"The key to the whole contest was the way we came back in the first inning," Dedeaux said. "We've done that (comeback) all year, but I was a bit concerned when Southern Illinois hit the ball so well in the first inning."

"But Barr was excellent after the first," Dedeaux said of his star pitcher who also defeated Southern Illinois Monday night, 5-3.

Dedeaux admitted he was uncertain of a starting pitcher in the championship game against the Hurricanes from Miami.

"I'll have to mull that over some," he said. "It could be one of many. We don't have to hold anything back because this is it."

Evert Wins With Rally

PARIS (UPI) — America's top-seeded Chris Evert rallied twice Friday to defeat a tired Helga Masthoff of West Germany, 7-5, 6-4, and advance to the women's final of the French Open Tennis Championships.

Miss Evert, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., will next meet her doubles partner, Olga Morozova of the Soviet Union, Sunday for the $8,000 top prize. Miss Morozova stopped South American champion Raquel Giscafre of Argentina, 6-3, 6-2, in the other semifinal on the slow red clay courts of Roland Garros Stadium.

In the battle between 19-year-old Miss Evert and 32-year-old Miss Masthoff, the six feet two inch German's net attack carried her to leads of 4-1 in the first set and 3-2, 4-0 love in the second.

"She started out awfully tough," America's number two ranked woman said. "Her big serving and volleying surprised me."

"I started out slow and then I got mad at myself. I was hitting the ball too soft, but then I started moving her around and hitting my drop shots."

After Miss Evert tied the second set at 3-3, her backcourt game held dependable and carried her to a 5-3 lead. The German girl held her service, but in the 10th game, she hit a forehand long at 40-30 to give Chris her fifth straight-set victory of the tournament.

Miss Morozova's convincing victory made her the first Russian ever to make a singles final in the French championships.

The 25-year-old Soviet No. One player and Miss Evert have moved into the women's doubles final and are to play West German Katja Ebbinghaus and Gail Chaffreanu of France Saturday for the championship.

Aaron Boosts Braves; Cubs Clobber Astros

By Associated Press

Henry Aaron belted his 11th home run of the season and a r n-scoring double Friday night, pacing the Atlanta Braves to their sixth victory in the last seven starts, a 6-1 decision over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Braves Pitcher Roric Harrison, 4-7, scattered eight hits and drilled a two-run homer to help his own cause.

Aaron's homer, a 400-blast over the left field fence in the second inning, was the 724th of his career. It gave Atlanta a 1-0 lead, and his RBI double in the third made it 2-0. Harrison's sixth-inning homer put the game out of reach.

Elsewhere in the National League, pitcher Burt Hooton doubled to spark a seven-run third inning and singled home a run later in the inning Friday, leading the Chicago Cubs to a 10-7 victory over the Houston Astros. Hooton's hits were his first of the season after going 0-for-26.

Hooton was not as effective as a pitcher, however, getting knocked out in the fourth inning. But Jim Todd came on in relief and retired 13 men in a row in one stretch to earn the first victory of his major league career.

The Los Angeles Dodgers' Tommy John became the National League's first 10-game winner by beating the New York Mets 3-2. It was his fifth consecutive victory and 15th in his last 16 decisions, but he needing last-out relief help from Mike Marshall following Cleon Jones' two-run homer.

Dock Ellis spun a four-hitter, Richie Zisk ripped a tie-breaking, two-run double and Willie Stargell belted a home run to give the Pittsburgh Pirates a 4-2 victory over the San Francisco Giants.

Johnny Bench's run-scoring single sparked the Cincinnati Reds to six runs in the third inning and a 7-4 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies, despite two home runs by the Phils' Mike Schmidt, whose error helped keep Cincinnati's big inning alive. Schmidt now has 16 home runs, one behind major league leader Jim Wynn of the Dodgers.

Speedy Derrel Thomas drove in four runs with an inside-the-park home run and a single to lead the San Diego Padres to a 5-4 victory over the Montreal Expos. Thomas' homer came in the third inning, a 400-foot smash that bounced against the fence in right center.

In the American League, consecutive run-scoring singles by Tommy Davis and Jim Fuller in the eighth inning carried the Baltimore Orioles to a 2-1 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

Minnesota erupted for seven runs in the third inning, four of them on Eric Soderholm's grand-slam homer, and coasted to a 8-2 decision over the Cleveland Indians. Joe Decker, 7-4, checked the Indians on five hits, including homers by Charlie Spikes and Dave Duncan.

Successive home runs by John Mayberry and Hal McRae in the fifth inning powered the Kansas City Royals to a 4-3 victory over the Detroit Tigers, while Cesar Tovar drove in three runs with a suicide squeeze bunt in the fifth inning and a two-run single in the sixth, helping the Texas Rangers to a 7-2 victory.

Money Small Soviet Worry

By MIKE HUGHES

UPI Executive Sports Editor MOSCOW (UPI) — In this day of galloping inflation, money is Moscow's least concern with respect to playing host to the 1980 Olympic Games.

"The cost of staging the Olympic Games is of no concern to us," said Sergei Pavlov, Chairman of the Committee of Physical Culture and Sports in the USSR and the man who'll plead Moscow's case before the International Olympic Committee at Vienna, Oct. 23, when the decision will be announced.

Bidding against Moscow, as it did in 1970 along with successful Montreal, is the city of Los Angeles, the host in 1932 when the summer Games were last staged in the United States.

The unofficial word is that Moscow will be a runaway victor because the Californian city does not appear to be a serious candidate.

While Los Angeles has conducted its affairs in amateur fashion, Moscow has gone about the job with Madison Avenue zeal and most of the 73 men who'll vote in Vienna, together with officials of the various international federations, have been accorded a red carpet welcome by the Soviets.

The main question mark against Moscow, which already has most of the facilities built to stage a successful Games, is the Soviet attitude towards its Jewish population, the Chinese, Israelis and other nations who do not enjoy good diplomatic relations with the Socialist bloc.

Time and time again Pavlov said, "The Games will be conducted in accordance with the rules laid down by the International Olympic Committee," an august body which does not recognize cast, color or creed and lives in the 20th century with the election of Lord Michael Killanin as its President.

"We have given Lord Killanin guarantees in writing," Pavlov said, "and I'll remind you the Soviet government doesn't give guarantees without serious thought to the problem at hand."

Reminded that the Soviet Union has a history of introducing politics into sport—the latest example came when its soccer team refused to meet Chile in a playoff for the World Cup after the fall of the Marxist government of Salvador Allende—Pavlov said, "I'll say it again, we shall play to the rules of the IOC."

Pavlov laid the blame for the soccer debacle at the feet of former FIFA president, Sir Stanley Rous of Britain, "who made promises and did not honor them."

Pavlov said, "We face a lot of problems, particularly with regard to hotel accommodation and communications facilities with overseas countries, but we are aware of them and have a plan to overcome these problems."

The chairman said visas will be issued to foreigners at border entry points—and the Soviets expect four million foreigners—and that a special communications satellite will be launched to cope with the demands of the expected 6,000 members of the media.

Pavlov said he was aware the IOC is worried about the size of the Games, "but we certainly don't expect to spend less than Munich did in 1972 when their total bill came to some $961 million."

Pavlov rejected out of hand that the Socialist countries enter professionals, in everything but name, in the Games. "Some 35,000 of our athletes travel overseas every year. We see how others operate and we could say something about the practice in the West where everything is not as it should be."

Rambunctious Road? Maybe

By MARK GORDON

Star Sports Writer

Omaha — If Rambunctious Road follows instructions, he will get his picture taken in the winner's circle late Saturday afternoon at Ak-Sar-Ben.

But following instructions from either his trainer Jack Van Berg or his rider have not been one of the 3-year-old colt's better achievements as a race horse. He's a pesky runner who does what he wants when he wants.

That's why he's had trouble at times, although when he's paying attention to his cues, he's as good a horse as Van Berg trains.

That probably makes him the horse to beat in the ninth running of Saturday's $20,000-added 4-H Handicap for 3-year-olds over one mile and 70 yards.

Rambunctious Road, who will be coupled in the wagering with Operating, is coming off a smart win in the $25,700 Ak-Sar-Ben Breeders' Sprint Stakes over 6 furlongs. The Shinarump Farm Inc. standouts broke slowly and then rallied for a 1½-length verdict over Paul Kemling's Patsy's Reign.

Rambunctious has three wins, three seconds and one third in nine runs this season for earnings of $27,694.

The Van Berg runner will carry 120 pounds — two less than the Diamond Stables Ltd.'s Port of The Sea has been assigned by racing secretary-handicapper John Maluvius.

The race's top-weighted horse is also coming off an impressive victory. He scored a virtual wire-to-wire one-length triumph here last Friday a mile and 70-yard allowance race over eight opponents.

That was his first triumph in four 1974 runs (with one third). In 1973, he earned $45,795 on six wins in nine outings, including his last three 1973 runs at Turf Paradise in Phoenix.

Port of The Sea will have a runningmate — Doctor Stat. No riders were named for either the Van Berg horses while regular rider Gary DeJong will have the mount on Port of The Sea and Nels Petersen will be up on Doctor Stat.

Van Berg is aiming to avenge last year's second-place showing by his Island Leader. The winner of that race was Ken Opstein's Royal Knight, last year's Ak-Sar-Ben 3-year-old champion.

Other entrants and their weights include A. H. Stall's Mr. Tomahawk, 117 pounds; Ken Simon's Ogan, 115; R. O. Kerr's Please N Reason and Del Rathman's For Good Times, each 114; Paul Jones' Foreign Intent and George McLaughlin's Dos Reyes, each 113 pounds; Patsy Wilson and Virginia Inman's Patty's Hoss, and W. A. Gebhardt's Camp Whip, each 112; and L. L. Tuck's Coello, 110.

The State Fairgrounds Race Meet will join other Nebraska racetracks with 48-hour entries, the State Fair Board decided Friday. Fairgrounds racing begins July 16 for a run of 26 racing days.

"The public has really gone for 48-hour entries at Fanner Park and Ak-Sar-Ben," said Fair Manager Henry Brandt. "It appears to be the 'in' thing, and it will not create any additional hardship for us." The 48-hour plan gives bettors an additional 24 hours to study the racing forms.

MAMARONECK, N.Y. (AP) — Arnie's back.

Not all the way, perhaps.

He's not yet a winner again.

But Arnold Palmer, written off as a has-been and nothing more than a sentimental choice in the pre-tourney speculation, is half-way home in the 74th United States Open Golf Championship.

The aging king of another era of golfing glory called on the half-remembered magic that once was his alone for a 70 that enabled him to shoulder his way into a four-way tie for the lead in the second round of this national championship Friday.

But Palmer, mired in the miseries of the worst slump of his legendary career, isn't yet counting the crown his.

"I feel the same pressure I felt 20 years ago," he said. "I get nervous just like everybody else. You can't subdue it. You just have to live with it, learn to play with it."

But he couldn't help looking forward to a possible triumph, one that would tie him with Ben Hogan for second place on the all-time major victory list and provide him with another last laugh over the skeptics who have written his golfing obituary.

"It would mean so much to me," he said. "It would mean a lot to me, a very great deal to me, in a personal sense, in many personal ways. I really don't want to think too much about it yet."

But, while Palmer and Player remained among the leaders, some of the game's other big guns fired and fell back.

Defending champion Johnny Miller took a horrendous, quadruple-bogey seven on the parthree seventh hole—it took him four strokes to get out of a bunker—had a 75, a 151 total and wrote himself out of title contention.

"I'll be yukking it up the next two rounds, just having fun," said Miller, the sensation of the pro tour with five victories already this season.

Jack Nicklaus struggled to a 74—149, nine shots over par and six behind.

"I didn't play particularly well, but if I'd putted at all, I'd have had a decent round," said Nicklaus, holder of a record 14 major titles and a pre-tourney favorite for this one.

"I had it in position enough. I had it close enough. But if you're going to score, you've got to get something in the hole. I didn't."

The 44-year-old Palmer, trailed by a massive gallery of the still-faithful army, put together a two-round total of 143, three over par for two trips through the trees, traps, trouble and subtle terror that make up the 6,961-yard Winged Foot Golf Club course.

"I'm not interested in what is leading the golf tournament today," he said. "I'm interested in the end of the tournament. It was not my goal to lead at the end of 36 holes."

"I just wanted to be in the right position."

NFL Players Seriously Claim Strike May Materialize In July

Washington (AP) — The National Football League Players Association said Friday the union is quite serious about a strike and will do all it can legally to prevent rookies and free agents from going to training camp.

"We hope we can avoid it (a strike)," Ed Garvey, union executive director, told a news conference. "We don't think it is good for the players, the owners or the fans."

He said a strike, if it comes, would begin July 1, a few days before the training camps open.

Garvey, with Kermit Alexander, NFLPA vice president and Philadelphia Eagle defensive back, and George Burman, former Washington Redskins center and economics consultant to the union, talked to newsmen about the three days of meetings in New York with the NFL Management Council, the owners' bargaining unit, that ended Thursday.

"We really thought when we left this room last week, they were going to give us counter proposals," said Garvey, referring to a meeting held in Washington last week. "But they just sat there. They refused to give us any counter proposals."

"Unless we get a response, the meetings scheduled for next week seem futile."

The players and owners are scheduled to meet in Washington Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday on the 63 contract demands the union made. Originally, the association made 57 demands and then added 33 more. The group rewrote them, consolidating the 90 into 63.

The major thrust of the union's demands are the so-called nine "freedom issues" which essentially would give the players the opportunity to move from one team to another after his contract expired.

Garvey said the owners "absolutely refuse to give counter-proposals. They have yet to engage in good faith bargaining. All they say is 'You change your demands and come back to us.' They have responded to only one demand, the union shop, and they rejected it."

Garvey said of the New York meetings: "Temperatures got really hot yesterday. It was not a pleasant situation."

The executive director described as an "arrogant statement" comments by Max Winter, president of the Minnesota Vikings, that "I expect the players to strike this summer. We're going to play the 1974 season whether they do or not. They can strike but they can't prevent us from signing football players, even if they are sub-caliber by NFL standards."

Garvey: "We're not going to allow rookies to play, it's not fair to the fans. We're going to have to set up picket lines and close down the camps."

"We're not going to be able to hold every rookie out. First off, we don't even know who they are. They haven't told us who they have signed. So if there is a strike, it won't be 100 per cent."

"But we'll have the veterans at the camps explaining to the rookies what the strike is all about. The guys coming out of college will find out what the issues are."

USC Ousts SIU ... Trojans Triumph, 7-2

By DAVE SITTLER

Omaha — Proud and confident Southern California moved into the finals of the College World Series for the fifth straight year Friday night with an easy 7-2 win over Southern Illinois University.

Although outbatted by the Salukis nine to six, the Trojans — as they've done the entire series — put together a few hits in key spots to gain the championship game against No. 1 rated Miami Saturday at 7:30 p.m.

Coach Rod Dedeaux's Trojans were led by senior pitcher Mark Barr. Although Barr allowed nine hits, the 6-3, 200-pounder was able to continually stay out of serious trouble.

"I was just trying to keep the ball around the plate and let the defense do the rest," Barr said. "I didn't care how many runs they (Southern Illinois) got because I knew I had a hell of a defense backing me up."

The Trojan defense, led by all-American third baseman Rich Dauer, pulled off three double plays against the Salukis to aid Barr's cause.

"They (Southern Cal's defense) really had more double plays than that (three)," Barr said. "I think the umpires took a few away from them. But I'm not complaining."

Barr's only real trouble came in the first inning when Coach Richard "Itchy" Jones' Salukis came up with three hits. But the Salukis could manage only one run.

Bert Newman led off the game with a double up the middle followed by John Hoscheidt's signal to right. The Trojan defense then threw Newman out at home on Steve Shartzer's ground ball. Jim Locascio's single to center scored Hoscheidt but Barr got Mike Wilkins to bounce into a double play ending the inning.

"I've always had trouble for some reason in the first inning," Barr explained after upping his season mark to 10-1. "I don't know if I warm up to long and get tired, or not enough."

Barr had little to worry about when his teammates got their first chance at the plate. The four-time defending national champions came up with five runs in the first inning to leave little doubt of the outcome.

The Trojans jumped on Southern Illinois starter Bill Dunning as Creighton Tevlin walked, Marvin Cobb singled, Dauer singled scoring Tevlin and Steve Kemp walked.

That was all for Dunning, who failed to get an out. Ron Hodges replaced Dunning, but the Trojans continued scoring via a Southern Illinois error, a sacrifice fly and a double by Mark Carpenter.

"The key to the whole contest was the way we came back in the first inning," Dedeaux said. "We've done that (comeback) all year, but I was a bit concerned when Southern Illinois hit the ball so well in the first inning."

"But Barr was excellent after the first," Dedeaux said of his star pitcher who also defeated Southern Illinois Monday night, 5-3.

Dedeaux admitted he was uncertain of a starting pitcher in the championship game against the Hurricanes from Miami. "I'll have to mull that over some," he said. "It could be one of many. We don't have to hold anything back because this is it."

Evert Wins With Rally

PARIS (UPI) — America's top-seeded Chris Evert rallied twice Friday to defeat a tired Helga Masthoff of West Germany, 7-5, 6-4, and advance to the women's final of the French Open Tennis Championships.

Miss Evert, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., will next meet her

Miami is expected to start its ace righthander, Stan Jakubowski. Jakubowski handed Southern California its only loss in this series last Wednesday, in a 7-3 decision.

USC upped its season mark to 49-20 while crowd-pleasing Southern Illinois, the district 4 champion, ended its year with a 50-11 mark.

In the battle between 19-year-old Miss Evert and 32-year-old Miss Masthoff, the six feet two inch German's net attack carried her to leads of 4-1 in the first set and 3-2, 40-love in the second.

"She started out awfully tough," America's number two ranked woman said. "Her big serving and volleying surprised me."

"I started out slow and then I got mad at myself. I was hitting the ball too soft, but then I started moving her around and hitting my drop shots."

Miss Morozova's convincing victory made her the first Russian ever to make a singles final in the French championships.

Aaron Boosts Braves; Cubs Clobber Astros

By Associated Press

Henry Aaron belted his 11th home run of the season and a run-scoring double Friday night, pacing the Atlanta Braves to their sixth victory in the last seven starts, a 6-1 decision over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Braves Pitcher Horie Harrison, 4-7, scattered eight hits and drilled a two-run homer to help his own cause.

Aaron's homer, a 400-blast over the left field fence in the second inning, was the 724th of his career. It gave Atlanta a 1-0 lead, and his RBI double in the third made it 2-0. Harrison's sixth-inning homer put the game out of reach.

Elsewhere in the National League, pitcher Burt Hooton doubled to spark a seven-run third inning and singled home a run later in the inning Friday, leading the Chicago Cubs to a 10-7 victory over the Houston Astros. Hooton's hits were his first of the season after going 0-for-26.

Hooton was not as effective as a pitcher, however, getting knocked out in the fourth in-

The Los Angeles Dodgers' Tommy John became the National League's first 10-game winner by beating the New York Mets 3-2. It was his fifth consecutive victory and 15th in his last 16 decisions, but he needed last-out relief help from Mike Marshall following Cleon Jones' two-run homer.

Dock Ellis spun a four-hitter, Richie Zisk ripped a tie-breaking, two-run double and Willie Stargell belted a home run to give the Pittsburgh Pirates a 4-2 victory over the San Francisco Giants.

He's not yet a winner again.

But Arnold Palmer, written off as a has-been and nothing more than a sentimental choice in the pre-tournament speculation, is half-way home in the 74th United States Open Golf Championship.

The aging king of another era of golfing glory called on the half-remembered magic that once was his alone for a 70 that enabled him to shoulder his way into a four-way tie for the lead in the second round of this national championship Friday.

But Palmer, mired in the miseries of the worst slump of his legendary career, isn't yet counting the crown his.

"I feel the same pressure I felt 20 years ago," he said. "I get nervous just like everybody else. You can't subdue it. You just have to live with it, learn to play with it."

But he couldn't help looking forward to a possible triumph, one that would tie him with Ben Hogan for second place on the all-time major victory list and provide him with another last laugh over the skeptics who have written his golfing obituary.

"It would mean so much to me," he said. "It would mean a lot to me, a very great deal to me, in a personal sense, in many personal ways. I really don't want to think too much about it yet."

But, while Palmer and Player remained among the leaders, some of the game's other big guns fired and fell back.

Defending champion Johnny Miller took a horrendous, quadruple-bogey seven on the parthree seventh hole—it took him four strokes to get out of a bunker—had a 75, a 151 total and wrote himself out of title contention.

"I'll be yukking it up the next two rounds, just having fun," said Miller, the sensation of the pre-tour with five victories already this season.

Jack Nicklaus struggled to a 74—149, nine shots over par and six behind.

"I didn't play particularly well, but if I'd putted at all, I'd have had a decent round," said Nicklaus, holder of a record 14 major titles and a pre-tourney favorite for this one.

"I had it in position enough. I had it close enough. But if you're going to score, you've got to get something in the hole. I didn't."

The 44-year-old Palmer, trailed by a massive gallery of the still-faithful army, put together a two-round total of 143, three over par for two trips through the trees, traps, trouble and subtle terror that make up the 6,961-yard Winged Foot Golf Club course.

"I'm not interested in what is leading the golf tournament today," he said. "I'm interested in the end of the tournament. It was not my goal to lead at the end of 36 holes."

"I just wanted to be in the right position."

Winterhalter Defeats Poor Putting Habits

By RANDY YORK

Mike Winterhalter doesn't try to disguise his golfing weakness. "I used to be known as the Gorilla of the Greens," he admits.

His reputation as a poor putter is well-founded, he also concedes. "Two years ago I set what still stands as the course record at the Salt Lake City (Utah) Country Club," offers Winterhalter.

"I hit all 18 greens in regulation," he explains, "and I 3-putted 14 of them. No lie. They recognize that as the record."

The 28-year-old Winterhalter, however, virtually obliterated his bad putting reputation Friday at the Lincoln Country Club in the 21st LCC Swingfest.

He clicked for five "natural" birdies enroute to an even par 35-37-72. The effort provided the impetus for the first round lead as Winterhalter and Omaha's Howard Martig combined for a 57 in the best ball event.

The pair achieved rounds of 27 and 30 to assume a 3-stroke lead over Swingfest Scotch 2-ball winners Bob Hinds and Ed Burke and over Billie Joe Sanchez and Frank Tomlins. Saturday's final round has "shotgun" starts at 8:15 a.m. and 1 p.m.

"I was putting out of my mind," allowed Winterhalter, who sank three 10-foot putts, a 15-footer and a 20-footer for his birdies, registered on hole Nos. 1, 2, 3, 9 and 13.

Winterhalter credits a new putter purchased two weeks ago in Omaha for his improved game. "It's a plug putter," he acknowledges. "I've practiced with it every night for two weeks. It made a difference today — no 3-putt greens."

"I also bought a new set of woods Thursday from Jerry Fisher here at the Country Club and that part of my game couldn't be better either," added Winterhalter.

Winterhalter, who served as U.S. Congressman John McCollister's administrative assistant last year in Washington, "decided to come back to God's country."

He starts Monday in a new position as manager of the Family Banking Center for the Omaha National Bank. Partner "Bad Howard" Martig owns an Omaha plumbing company.

UNO's Kelley Quits Position

Omaha (UPI) — Ron Kelley, former minor league pitcher with the Boston Red Sox organization, has resigned his post as assistant baseball coach at the University of Nebraska-Omaha, the university said Friday.

Kelley will become principal of Central Elementary School in the Lewis Central School System in Council Bluffs, Iowa.

He had served also as counselor in the university division at UNO.

Enright Earns MVP Award

Craig Enright of Cedar Rapids, Ia., younger brother of University of Nebraska player Mark Enright, was named the most valuable player during the third week of the Cornhusker basketball school by NU coach Joe Cipriano.

The veteran Husker mentor also announced that John Lafin of Crab Orchard was the most valuable midlevel player in camp, while Bob Hughes of Battle Creek (minors) and John Kugler of McCook (majors) were the other MVP's named.

The hoop school will have two more weekly sessions on the Nebraska campus.

year sweep of all the game's major titles, had to mount an incredible rally — birdies on four of his last eight holes — to retain a share of the top spot after blowing six strokes to par on the first six holes he played.

He finished with a 73.

Irwin, whose seven-year pro career has shown steady improvement, matched par 70 despite a poor finish while Floyd had to chip in three times for a wildly erratic 71.

A pair of youngsters, Tom Kite and Tom Watson — each 24, each in his second year on the pro tour and each seeking his first professional victory — were just one shot back halfway through this, the most prestigious of all the world's golf championships. Kite had a 70 and Watson a 71.

Tom Weiskopf had a 73-149. Millionaire Bruce Crampton took 77-149.

But their problems were nothing when compared with those of Lee Trevino, England's Tony Jacklin and Billy Casper, who scored the first of his two U.S. Open triumphs on this same course 15 years ago.

All three missed the cut; it took a score of 153 to qualify for the final 36 holes. Casper had 76-156. Jacklin took 76-154. And Trevino struggled to a 78-156.

"I just didn't play well enough to handle this course," said Trevino, who left immediately for his home in El Paso, Tex. "It's the hardest course I've ever seen."

While the scores remained high — the three-over-par figure was the highest to lead after 36 holes since the 1955 U.S. Open — the course played about one shot easier than it had the day before.

There were four subpar rounds. Bert Yancey had 69-145. Frank Beard was 69-146. Larry Ziegler improved 10 shots, from 78 to 68. And Hubert Green, a three-time winner this season, improved an incredible 14 shots, from 81 to 67. He didn't make a bogey.

By contrast, Player was the only man able to match par in the exceptionally high scoring of the first round.

But he didn't get too excited.

"You can't get reckless on this course," he said. "There are times you can't go for the pin. If the pin is in a precarious position, and, say you're not in good position, it would be stupid to go for the pin."

"Take 17. The pin is on the right. If you go for the pin, you could get yourself in trouble real easy, maybe make bogey, or double bogey. I knew that if I hit it to the middle of the green it would kick right at the pin. That's the way the green is contoured."

That's what he did.

He was one shot out of the lead at that stage. He lofted the iron shot to the middle of the green and it kicked right. After a hitch of the pants, he stroked the putt home for a birdie.

He also scored from 15 feet on the first hole, needed only a two-footer for birdie on the parfive 12th and three times saved par with putts of less than three feet after missing the green.

He bogeyed three times. Two of them came after he missed the green and failed on 12-15 foot putts. The other was on the sixth hole. He rimmed out an 18-foot birdie putt there, then missed from two feet coming back.

"That one hurt," he said. "It was like a two-stroke swing. I thought I had a birdie and I walked off with a bogey."

"Did someone move in the gallery? Did something bother you on the second putt?" he was asked.

"I moved. I bothered me," Palmer replied.

Palmer has been mired in the deepest, most dismal, most frustrating slump of his storied career.

He's missed the cut for the final two rounds in his last three starts, something that never before had happened to him.

He doesn't rank among the game's top 100 money winners for this season.

Former Husker Dixon Released

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP)—Former University of Nebraska running back Gary Dixon was released Friday by the Portland Storm of the World Football League.

Dixon and eight others, including former Colorado defensive lineman Dave Capra were trimmed from the squad by head coach Dick Courcy.

The cuts reduced the Portland roster to 64 players.

Lincoln Named To Bicentennial Community List

Eight Nebraska towns became Bicentennial Communities after endorsement Friday by the Nebraska American Revolution Bicentennial Commission (NBC).

The names of Lincoln, Johnson, Stromsburg, Polk, Clay Center, North Bend, Elgin and Edgar will now be sent to Washington, D.C. for national bicentennial recognition.

NBC endorsed matching federal funds for Lexington High School "Minutemen" band uniforms.

The band will march and play music of the Revolutionary War period, according to band director Ronald Iles.

NBC also endorsed July 4th Children's Block Parades which have been held annually in Lincoln since 1968.

Howard Stalnaker was re-elected chairman of NBC. Mrs. William Hasebrook was elected vice chairman; William Moreland, secretary; and Alfred Gilpin, treasurer.

Manslaughter Charge Filed

Omaha (AP) — A Macy youth was formally charged with voluntary manslaughter here Friday in connection with an incident on the Omaha Indian Reservation that left another man dead.

Officials said Roger Stabler, 17, appeared before U.S. Magistrate Richard Peck and was charged in the bludgeoning death of his brother-in-law, Wayne Grant, 30, also of Macy.

Retirement Training Grant Requested

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

The Nebraska Commission on Aging Friday approved two grant applications totaling $231,944 in federal funds for two pilot projects providing senior citizens with day care services and pre-retirement education.

Commission Director Joe Gaida told the commission that he had taken the liberty of making the applications prior to the meeting without commission approval.

Gaida said he was informed on short notice that added funds would be available for such projects out of fiscal 1974 moneys.

The pre-retirement education program, costing $65,112 over 15 months, would train teachers to conduct sessions to accclimate new retirees to the problems of retirement. The seminars, which would be held through various schools, would be open to all.

Gaida called the program a preventive medicine which could save some retirees from institutionalization and premature death.

He said the need is apparent when one considers the years it takes to train people for careers and the lack of preparation given many people when retirement comes.

If approved, Gaida said the program would be the first statewide pre-retirement program in the country.

The second grant application for $166,832 would give senior citizens needing care and assistance around their home aid on a daily basis. The tentative sites for the day care program would be Omaha, Lincoln, Norfolk and North Platte.

Gaida said "day care" is an unfortunate term for the program, since it is equated with babysitting. Services such as therapy would be provided, he said, instead of solely supervision.

Any person over the age of 60 would be eligible.

China Rejects Corn

Washington (AP) — An Agriculture Department report showed that the People's Republic of China has canceled orders for U.S. corn valued at current prices at about $140 million but has decided to buy $121 million worth of soybeans from next fall's crop.

Sale, Expansion Slated For Lincoln Company

By H. J. ANDERSON

Star Staff Writer

The sale and future expansion of Bair Manufacturing Co. of Lincoln was announced Friday by the Lincoln Chamber of Commerce.

The company produces principally shot shell and rifle reloading equipment and accessories used by individual hunters. It is also involved in metal working and aluminum die casting.

Ereshiel Maschka said he bought the firm this month but past owner Harley J. Bair will remain with the company until August.

Maschka plans to increase the number of employees from the current 65 to 140 within a year, he said. The number may reach 230 by 1977, he said.

There are no plans to increase the size of the plant, he said.

Maschka predicted a 55% increase in annual production of the reloading equipment. He said the company plans to expand its market to yet undetermined countries.

The product is now sold in the United States, Canada, Australia and New Zealand.

Maschka is a 1957 graduate of the University of Nebraska and received an MBA from Creighton University in 1965.

He was general manager and vice president of Leon Chemical and Plastics Co. of Grand Island before buying Bair Co.

Bair said he is retiring from industrial management to spend some time in investments.

Mayor Sam Schwartzkopf was present for the announcement.

Young Naturalist Will Direct Preserve

By JOEL THORSON

Outstate Nebraska Bureau Bellevue — Robert W. Fluchel, a 27-year-old doctoral candidate in ecology at Southern Illinois University, has been named director of the Fontenelle Forest Nature Center.

The announcement was made by Virgil J. Haggart, president of the center. Fluchel will replace Jim Malkowski, who resigned to become regional director of the Natural Science for Youth Foundation in Minneapolis.

As director of the wooded nature-education preserve just south of Omaha, Fluchel will bring more than two years of experience as an interpretive naturalist. He has spent two summers with the American Camping Association's itinerant ecological program, setting up nature education programs for children's resident camps.

"I've really enjoyed that," Fluchel said. "I'm interested more in wildlife than in anything else."

Contacted by phone, Fluchel said his new position was "ideal... almost like a dream. It's such a beautiful place. I'm sitting here now watching a warbler flitting around just outside the window."

Fluchel studied as an undergraduate at the University of Missouri, and has a master's degree from Southern Illinois University. For the last two years he has been working on his Ph.D. there while teaching conservation. He will continue work on his dissertation here.

He and his wife Barbara, an elementary teacher, have returned to Illinois to move. Fluchel will assume his position in early July.

The young naturalist was chosen over more than 50 candidates who applied to succeed Malkowski.

Handgun Law Too Broad — Attorney

By BOB GUENTHER

Star Staff Writer

The attorney for an Omaha man has asked the Nebraska Supreme Court to overturn a law prohibiting convicted felons from possessing handguns.

In a written brief filed Friday, an attorney for Willie Brooks Haynes called the law "excessively broad" and therefore unconstitutional.

While the intent of the law was termed "laudable," attorney Lawrence Batt said the Legislature failed to draft a precise enough law. The law, he said, was intended to keep weapons out of the hands of people who had been convicted of a crime of violence.

However, he said the term "felon" encompasses more than just crimes of violence while missing some violent acts.

For instance, he said a person convicted of misdemeanor assault and battery can lawfully possess a handgun while a bank officer convicted of felony embezzlement cannot possess a handgun.

The possession of a handgun by a felon, he said, is not in itself evil, but the gun clause "makes criminal activities (of acts) which by modern standards are normally innocent."

In Haynes' case, a man twice convicted of a felony was stopped and frisked by an Omaha policeman for "no apparent reason." Nothing was found on his person, but the officer checked a nearby trashcan he had heard a noise from earlier and found a handgun, registered to another man.

"The end result is that (Haynes) has been sentenced to serve a term of 15 months to five years in prison," he said.

The case, the attorney argued, "illustrates the potential for the misuse of any statute which transcends the valid limits of police power... the Legislature must once again attempt to rewrite the statute to meet constitutional requirements."

In 1973, the court rejected a similar suit challenging the gun clause on the grounds it violates the Second Amendment.

Auto Production Up

Detroit (AP) — U.S. automakers planned to build 177,381 cars this week, up 4% from last week but down 18% from a year ago, the industry trade newspaper Automotive News said Thursday.
